FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

QMC Airborne Role

BY MAJ. GEN. GEORGE A. HORKAN
The Quartermaster General

EARLY in 1950, prior to operations in Korea, the Quartermaster Corps was assigned a major role in the airborne field. To be specific, the Corps was assigned the responsibility for receipt, storage, distribution, and maintenance of airborne items. These include parachutes, both personnel and cargo, heavy drop containers, and cargo containers required for aerial supply in support of airborne operations.

The Quartermaster Corps in conjunction with OCAFF, developed the organizations required for its airborne service support mission. These organizations include the Airborne Quartermaster Parachute Supply and Maintenance Company (organic to airborne divisions), the Aerial Supply Company, the Air Equipment Repair and Depot Company, the Parachute Maintenance Detachment (for support of airborne regimental teams), the Quartermaster Supply Depot Company (which acts as an Aerial Supply Depot), and the Special Forces Parachute Rigging Detachment.

The accomplishment of the Quartermaster airborne mission entails broad training responsibilities as well. The Quartermaster Corps develops Quartermaster Airborne training literature and doctrine in addition to the appropriate Army Training Programs and Army Training Tests. It also conducts individual training in parachute packing, maintenance, and aerial delivery.

The Quartermaster airborne program involves extensive program planning for funds and requirements. In cooperation with the Air Force, it monitors the Quartermaster airborne item procurement program and collaborates in the research and development connected with parachute drop. Specifically the Air Force has research and development responsibility on parachutes and aerial delivery equipment. However, computation of requirements and funding for these requirements is a responsibility of the Quartermaster Corps. The Quartermaster Corps has primary research and development responsibilities for free fall delivery and on items required in connection with storage, issue, and maintenance of para-

*Copter Forum Set

The Ninth Annual Forum of the American Helicopter Society will be held in Washington, 14 through 17 May, climaxed by a helicopter air show held in cooperation with the Capital's Armed Forces Day celebration.

Headquarters for the Forum will be at the Mayflower Hotel.

Army Cpts. & Maj. May Go Up in March

The Army hopes to make some temporary promotions to captain and major before the end of the month to fill existing vacancies.

This was revealed late this week as arrangements were being completed to convene captain and major selection boards next week.

The captain board is slated to hold its first session on 17 March, followed two days later by the convening of the board to recommend majors.

And if possible, Army officials revealed, the first promotions will be made late in March.

The first group of promotions undoubtedly will be made up largely of officers who were within the zone of consideration for the selections made in 1951.

The new selections will be made under provisions of Circular No. 14, 26 Feb., which was published in full in the 7 March issue of THE JOURNAL.

Unofficial estimates indicate that under the criteria reported in this Circular, about 3,500 line officers will be eligible for consideration to temporary major (Please turn to Page 847)

ARMY W. O. BOARDS

An Army selection board to consider about 1300 warrant officers, W-1, for promotion to W-2 was convened 10 March at the Pentagon. The board will probably take about a month to complete the review of records.

Then, in April, the Army expects to convene boards to consider other warrant officers for promotions to W-3 and W-4.

REPEAL DAVIS RIDER

The Senate this week voted approval, without opposition, of the House-passed measure to repeal the Davis Amendment and send it to the White House. (See page 827 for a report on this and other Capitol Hill action during the week.)

AF Temp. Promotions Set For Next Month

Favorable Congressional action on the Davis Amendment, which had posed a serious barrier to promotion prospects, was followed this week by preparations at Air Force Headquarters for announcement of temporary officer promotions beginning 1 April.

Officials were hesitant to discuss details of the manner in which the promotions would be announced—whether by Headquarters or by the Major Commands—but a spokesman said that some advancements would be made on or about 1 April.

It was reported that the boards which have been meeting at the Pentagon to review recommendations from the field have now completed their assignments. This means that eligibility lists have been prepared or are being prepared for temporary promotions to captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

The Air Force has stated previously that if promotions are made in increments from among officers selected by the commands, the eligibility lists for the various ranks will not be made public.

Hope has been expressed that the Air Force will reverse this decision, but no information as to a possible change in policy was available late this week.

It can be expected that more details (Please turn to Page 847)

Defense Department Releases Long-Awaited Rules For $50-$200 Uniform Allowances To Reservists

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson this week approved regulations of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps which will permit payment of Uniform Allowances to Reservists under provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act.

The payments range from $50 to $200. The AFRA was passed on 9 July 1952, with effective date of 1 Jan. 1953, but implementation of the Uniform Allowances was delayed because of questions of interpretation.

Another major area of dispute in AFRA is the matter of contract tours for Reservists. Congress gave approval for five-year contract tours, which would permit severance payments if Reservists were released from active duty prematurely.

The Defense Department originally had been told by the Bureau of the Budget that the five-year tour was all right, but the BOB apparently has switched its position and now wants the guarantees reduced to two or three years.

This matter remains to be decided. Although regulations have been promulgated concerning the Uniform Allowance payments, it is known that all questions still have not been answered.

At least 13 questions now are before the Comptroller General on complicated provisions of the Uniform Allowance sections of AFRA.

However, the Defense Department has given the go ahead for payments in the large majority of eligible cases.

The broad rules which will govern the payments were explained in a Defense Department statement release on 12 March.

The Journal publishes the complete text of the official Pentagon announcement on page 832.

Budget Bureau Given New Crack at Funds

The Bureau of the Budget will take second whacks at the fiscal 1954 military budget beginning next week.

Capitol Hill appropriations experts reportedly are anticipating that on the second go-round the BOB will recommend a slash of at least $2 billion—possibly as much as $4 billion—from the $41.5 billion requested by then President Truman on 9 Jan.

In anticipation of the upcoming BOB action, the House Appropriations Committee, in a surprise action, has suspended its hearings on the 1954 military budget until 15 April.

This means that when the Appropriations Committee gets down to brass tacks treatment of the military funds bill it will be an Eisenhower Defense Budget and not a Truman Defense Budget that is under consideration.

Since the beginning of this month, BOB officials have been sitting in on Pentagon discussions concerning the amended '54 budget. However, as was the case late last year, when the BOB representatives participated in Pentagon meetings on the $41.5 billion budget, they are not committed to abide by the conclusions reached at the Department of Defense level.

It is pertinent to recall that former Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett recommended as a "bare bones" budget about $1 billion more than was approved by the BOB and Mr. Truman.

In addition to the new estimates awaited from the BOB, the House Appropriations Committee has its own special team of investigators probing the Department of Defense and other Government agencies for weak spots in the budget.

Chairman John Taber (R-NY) of the Appropriations Committee has refused to disclose the names of the 18 investigators being paid $50 a day and expenses to "advise" him on the Defense budget. Observers are certain, however, that the report of these anonymous investigators will carry strong influence within the Appropriations Committee.

When the House Appropriations Committee summoned top Pentagon officials for hearings on the 1954 budget, it was anticipated that work would continue uninterrupted until the bill was reported.

But after the Secretaries and the military Chiefs presented their preliminary statements and answered questions, the Appropriations Military Subcommittee suddenly recessed hearings.

At the same time that Defense Department leaders were testifying at the Capitol on the Truman $41.5 billion budget—which includes $12.1 Army, $11.4 Navy and $16.8 billion Air Force—these same officials were engaged in conferences at the Pentagon aimed at achieving reduced requests, if possible.

F-84s Sweep Far Into Enemy Territory

F-84 Thunderjets, in the deepest penetration of North Korea by land-based planes in the Korean war, pounded the once industrially important Chingjon area in the far northeast corner, 60 miles below Siberia.

Chongjin, astride a main supply line along which enemy supplies are shipped from the Soviet Union to the front, is only five minutes by jet-flight from Siberia. This territory usually is covered by planes from Task Force 77. No reason was given why the F-84s penetrated this area, but obviously the Fifth Air Force proved that the fighter-bombers were capable of doubling the distance of their normal daily flights of 500 miles round-trip.

Hit Munitions Plant

Three other heavy air strikes battered Communist installations Thursday. Allied fighter-bombers struck a munitions plant near Suncheon, 30 miles north of Pyongyang. Carrier-based planes from the Valley Forge dived on the hydro-electric complex at Changjin Reservoir, dropping 50 tons of high explosives on Plant No. 1. Navy jets and propeller driven fighter-bombers from the Carrier Oriskany attacked the zinc and lead mines at Songjin, an east coast city between Hungnam and Chingjin. A Navy Corsair, returning from the mission, dislodged from its wing position an unexploded bomb when it landed aboard the Oriskany. Two men were killed and 15 wounded. Lt. Edwin Kummer, the pilot, escaped with minor burns and injuries.

Meanwhile, the battleship Missouri had a brief duel with Communist shore batteries as it was pulling out of the Wonsan Harbor after battering the port from this position for the sixth time during the war. The Missouri suffered no damage or casualties in the brief exchange. The next day, the flagship of the Seventh Fleet again returned to pump shells in the important east coast port.

Repulse Reds

On the central Korea front, five Communist attacks were beaten back by South Koreans defending Rocky Point, which ROK troops captured the day before. In the Sniper Ridge sector, Eighth Army reports said that South Koreans killed probably 64 Reds and wounded 40 more.

On Saturday, low clouds kept air action to a minimum, and enemy ground troops shifted their attacks to the western front and plastered Allied positions at Old Baldy and Porkchop Hill with artillery and mortar barrages. The next day, the Communists stepped up the rate of artillery fire to the heaviest this year, dropping 18,000 rounds on Allied positions in 24 hours.

Sabre jets, firing protective cover for fighter-bombers, shot down three MIG's, probably destroyed another and probably damaged one. One of the MIG's destroyed was credited to Col. Royal N. Baker, commander of the Fourth-Interceptor Group, who thus boosted his score to equal that of Maj. George A. Davis, leading jet ace of the war who was reported missing in action over North Korea a year ago. Each is listed as shooting down 11 MIG's. Major Davis also is credited with shooting down three propeller-driven enemy planes to Colonel Baker's one. The other MIG kills were credited to Maj. Harold J. Herrick and Lt. Leon B. Perkins. Lt. Col. Carroll B. McElroy was credited with the probably destroyed MIG.

Sabre jets again were successful the next day when three more MIG's were downed, four others possibly downed, and one damaged. Ground action bristled with minor but sharp Communist probes from near Panmunjom in the west to Heartbreak Ridge in the eastern mountains. The MIG kills were credited to Col. John W. Mitchell, Capt. Manuel J. Fernandez and 1st Lt. John W. Goodwill.

On Tuesday, stiff local fighting was stepped up all along the 155-mile front. The strongest Allied ground raids were made north of White Horse Mountain above Chorwon, in the old Iron Triangle of enemy defense.

United States casualties in Korea rose to 129,596 for the period through midnight 6 March, the Department of Defense announced this week.

The total figure includes 23,134 killed, 95,063 wounded and 11,399 missing in action. Broken down into the various services, the figures are:

Army—18,965 killed, 71,944 wounded and 9,971 missing; Navy—369 killed, 1,397 wounded and 87 missing; Marine Corps—3,300 killed, 21,680 wounded and 502 missing; Air Force—500 killed, 42 wounded and 839 missing.

Troop COs For Atomic Test Series Announced

The Department of Defense and Atomic Energy Commission announced this week the names of troop commanders who will participate in the atomic test series beginning 17 March at the Nevada Proving Ground.

The three commanders who will lead their respective services in the tests and maneuver exercises are Maj. Gen. John S. Mills, USAF; Brig. Gen. Wilbur S. Brown, USMC; and Col. William C. Bullock, USA.

This year's spring tests will include the firing of atomic shells from a 280 mm gun by a unit of the 52d Field Artillery Group, Ft. Sill, Okla., which has been studying the weapon in training exercises since it was unveiled to the public last fall.

The 280 mm gun is an all-weather artillery piece capable of firing both conventional and atomic shells.

"The series of tests is designed to advance development of new and improved nuclear devices and will provide additional weapons performance data essential to military and civil defense studies," a joint statement said.

General Mills, who graduated from the Military Academy in 1928, commanded the 450th Bomb Group in North Africa at the beginning of World War II. In 1944, he was appointed Chief of Operations for the Mediterranean Allied Air Force in Italy. In December of the same year, he became Chief Technical Assistant in the Materiel Division at AAF Headquarters. He has been commanding the Air Force Special Weapon Command since the fall of 1950.

General Brown, a veteran of World War I and II and Korea, is CO of Force Troops, Fleet Marine, Pacific, Camp Pendleton, Calif. Colonel Bullock commanded the 13th Field Artillery Observation Battalion and later the VII Corps Artillery in Europe during World War II. Since last Fall, he has been CO of Camp Stoneman, Calif.

Capt. Rickover Promotion Now Seen as Probable

Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson, in one of his first official acts to receive public notice, has issued orders virtually assuring the promotion of Capt. Hyman G. Rickover, the Navy's atomic submarine expert.

In a letter to Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), the new Navy Secretary proposed to "give Captain Rickover another opportunity to achieve the grade of rear admiral under precepts as favorable to him as the law permits."

The first action he will take, Secretary Anderson told the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is to convene a board which will recommend engineering duty captains for retention on active duty for a year. This board will be required to select one officer who is "experienced and qualified in the field of atomic propulsive machinery for ships."

Then, he said, the next regular flag board, which meets in July, will be told to select for promotion to rear admiral one engineering duty captain who meets these same requirements.

Senator Saltonstall, whose Senate Armed Services Committee held up confirmation of 39 new flag officers while investigating the Rickover case, released Secretary Anderson's letter on 9 March. The following day, the Navy announced the membership of the selection board which will consider Captain Rickover's continuation on the active list.

Adm. Jones Heads Board

The board is headed by Rear Adm. J. Carey Jones, Inspector General of the Navy, and has as one of its members the Navy Judge Advocate General, Rear Adm. Ira H. Nunn. Other members are Rear Admirals John E. Gingrich, Joseph F. Bolger, William L. Rees, William S. Parsons, Paul B. Nibecker, Wesley M. Hague and Wilson D. Leggett. The Recorder is Capt. Burton S. Hanson.

The board also will consider Aeronautical Engineering Duty Officers for continuation on the active list, at which time Admirals Nibecker, Hague and Leggett will be replaced by Rear Admirals Theodore C. Lonnquest, Lucien M. Grant and Lloyd Harrison.

THE JOURNAL has learned that the precept of the board which will consider EDO's is written in such manner that the selection of Captain Rickover is a fait accompli. Only nine engineering duty captains (not counting AEDO's) are eligible for consideration by the board. Of this group only Captain Rickover is "experienced and qualified in the field of atomic propulsive machinery for ships." Only one other officer in the group has had experience in the field, and observers say it is too negligible to warrant his selection on those grounds.

However, the Navy said the board has been given authority to select "more than one" officer in each of the two categories, EDO and AEDO. Thus, at least three other officers could be named by the board for continuation on the active list for another year.

A Navy source also told THE JOURNAL that somewhat similar circumstances will obtain in July when Captain Rickover is considered for promotion again. At that time, several officers who might be considered "experienced and qualified in the field of atomic propulsive machinery for ships," will be eligible for consideration, but few, if any, will be in the actual promotion zone. In addition to Captain Rickover, one other officer who may be qualified, will be in the group above the zone.

Could "Replace" Officer

Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, told the Senate Committee last week that the Navy has a number of captains who could replace Captain Rickover. During his testimony, he mentioned 11 captains who have been connected with the Navy's atomic program. However, THE JOURNAL learned that of this group, five (one of whom is retired) are now rear admirals, two are retired as captains, two are more than 240 names below the junior man in last year's flag zone, one is more than a thousand names below the zone, and one (like Captain Rickover) has been twice passed over for promotion to rear admiral.

The latter officer will not be considered for continuation by the board which meets next week because his forced retirement is not due until 30 June 1954, at which time he will have completed the minimum tour of service (31 years) authorized him by law.

In releasing the SecNav letter, Senator Saltonstall said it was "the outgrowth of discussions he had held with the Secretary following lengthy closed-door hearings." He said he hoped to bring the matter "before the Committee at an early date to find out whether the proposal recommended by Secretary Anderson would be acceptable to the Committee, and would clear the present road block which is delaying confirmation of 39 captains of the Navy for promotion to the grade of rear admiral." As THE JOURNAL went to press, the Committee voted to report the names of these officers to the Senate, noting that the Rickover case is now being handled by the Navy Secretary.

Text Of Letter

The text of Secretary Anderson's letter follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
Washington
6 March 1953

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This refers to our recent conversations relative to the non-selection of Captain Hyman G. Rickover to be a rear admiral in the Navy.

My opportunities to observe the operations of the Navy's statutory system of promotion by selection have been rather limited due to the short time I have been in office.

The system has, however, withstood the test of time and even if I could do so, I would be loath to suggest any changes in existing statutory processes at this time. So far as my individual office is concerned, I cannot alter the facts with reference to Captain Rickover because his non-selection is now an accomplished fact. It is my desire, however, to assure, so far as I can, an ample opportunity for everyone to demonstrate his merit.

I propose, therefore, to take the following action:

(a) Convene at once a selection board to recommend engineering duty captains for retention on active duty for a period of one year with a requirement in the precept that one of those recommended for retention be experienced and qualified in the field of atomic propulsive machinery for ships. Should Captain Rickover be recommended for retention under this precept, he will not be retired on 30 June 1953 and will be eligible for consideration for promotion to the grade of rear admiral by the selection board which will be convened in July 1953.

(b) Include in the precept of the selection board which will be convened in July 1953 a requirement that one engineering duty captain experienced and qualified in the field of atomic propulsive machinery for ships be selected for promotion to the grade of rear admiral. The action proposed above is authorized by existing law. It will serve to give Cap- (Please turn to Page 823)

Senate Group Orders Ammo Investigation

The Senate Armed Services Committee, after hearing testimony of General James A. Van Fleet, former Eighth Army Commander, and top officials of the Department of Defense, this week adopted unanimously a resolution declaring that General Van Fleet's allegations of "serious and at times critical" ammunition shortages were "fully substantiated."

The Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), called for a full-scale investigation by a five-man subcommittee into the ammunition situation.

Text of Resolution

This is the text of the resolution adopted by the Committee:

"Whereas, General James A. Van Fleet has testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee substantially as follows: (a) That during the period of his command in Korea, extending over a period of 22 months, there have been serious and at times critical shortages of ammunition; (b) That he reported almost daily the existence of such shortages; (c) That the shortages of ammunition substantially restricted the action of our troops and endangered our defense lines; (d) That when he left Korea the supplies of ammunition were improving but shortages still existed; and

"Whereas, the officials of the Army Department have unanimously testified that defense appropriations for ammunition, as promptly made by Congress upon request since the beginning of the Korean war, have been adequate;

"Be it resolved by this committee that it is our judgment that the statements above referred to by General Van Fleet have been fully substantiated by the testimony before the Committee; and

"Resolved further that the chairman appoint a subcommittee of five for the purpose of continuing this investigation and reporting to the Committee the officials and conditions responsible for this situation, of ammunition shortages in our services wherever they may exist and making such other recommendations as the subcommittee may deem helpful and advisable and at the same time require regular reports from the Defense Department as to the progress being made in producing ammunition in adequate supplies.

The committee, after hearing the former Eighth Army commander and his Pentagon superiors, including Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, and General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, concluded that General Van Fleet's testimony had "stood up." There has been a shortage of ammunition available to our front line troops, but this shortage did not result in the loss of any American lives, it was stated.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), chairman of the committee, declared he thought Generals Van Fleet and Collins were in substantial agreement except in "viewpoint."

Van Fleet's Statement

General Van Fleet last week told the committee:

"There has been a serious shortage of ammunition since I have been in Korea; there has been a critical shortage at times. There is today a serious shortage of some items of ammunition, but not all, and I can go into details of that with my proof later."

General Collins informed the congressional group in his prepared statement this week:

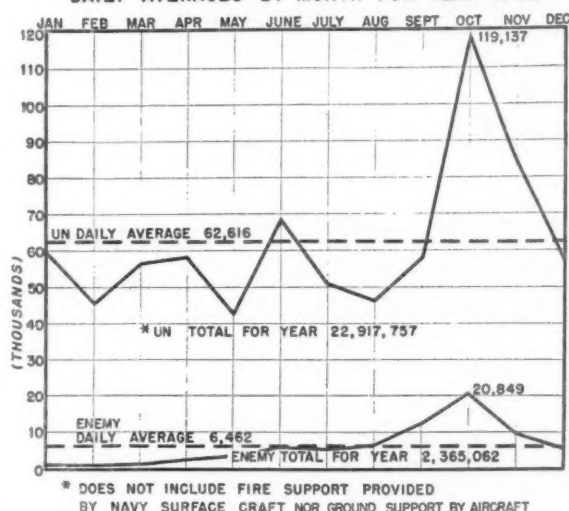

"There has always been a sufficient supply to carry on the United Nations operations and to insure that our forces could withstand any attack the enemy could launch and sustain, considering his capabilities.

"I have no doubt but that there have been instances when small units have run short of ammunition because of unusual weather or terrain conditions or because of enemy action, but these instances have been rare and of a temporary nature."

Mr. Wilson, who has been Secretary of Defense for six weeks, appeared only briefly before the committee. He read a prepared statement in which he said:

ENEMY VS UN MORTAR AND ARTILLERY DAILY AVERAGES BY MONTH FOR YEAR 1952

"As of now, we have the ammunition for operations on the present scale; soon, it is fair to state, we shall have the amounts necessary to give the field commanders considerable latitude in determining upon and supporting a more active type of operation."

Other Pentagon officials who testified were Robert T. Stevens, Secretary of the Army and Earl D. Johnson, Under Secretary of the Army. They agreed that there had been deficiencies in the strategic reserves of certain calibers of heavy artillery ammunition, but declared these shortages were being rapidly made up and current production was well in excess of current expenditures in Korea.

At the end of the all-day, closed-door session, Senator Saltonstall said that there was no specific evidence to back up the charge that any American lives had been lost because of the arms shortage.

"Regardless of what has taken place in the past," he summed up, "I believe we can say the situation in Korea today is good. It is not perfect because it never will be. Stocks of ammunition available in Korea today are adequate for the operations that are contemplated, and rapidly getting better."

Senator Saltonstall said that any discrepancy of testimony between Generals Van Fleet and Collins was "one of view point." He pointed out that General Van Fleet, as a field commander, had the responsibility for "firing shells." General Collins, on the other hand, he said, had a responsibility for what the Senator described as a "world-wide shortage."

General Collins at the outset of the hearing declared his "profound respect and admiration" for the retiring Eighth Army commander. General Collins said:

"It is the duty of the field commander in battle to concern himself with the situation in his particular command. At times he may even disagree with a higher commander on what he thinks he needs to accomplish his mission; and it is entirely possible that they both be right; for they are making their estimates from different points of view and with different responsibilities.

Different Estimates

"It is also possible that their estimates

Defense Department Awaits Service Reaction To Proposed Changes In Survivor Benefits Pay

THE Defense Department this week was awaiting the reaction of the Services to the report of the Special Survivor Benefits Committee, whose recommendations were published at length and analyzed in detail in the 7 March issue of THE JOURNAL. The inter-Service Committee recommended broad changes in current legislation pertaining to benefits for survivors of military personnel who die while on active duty.

The report went into detail concerning discriminatory provisions of current laws which make it possible for the widow of a Reservist to receive six times greater survivor benefits than those paid to the widow of a Regular, although the ranks of the two husbands were identical.

The Committee's plan would eliminate benefits under the Federal Employees Compensation Act. It would also substitute for all survivors of military personnel a revised death gratuity and coverage under Social Security.

A new plan of Service Compensation, equal to 80 per cent of the first $100 of basic pay, plus 40 per cent of the balance of basic pay, with a minimum monthly payment of $100, was advocated.

The following table shows how the Service Compensation Plan would work:

General Collins asserted that on the basis of six inspection tours to the Korean front, the most recent in January, 1953, he appraised the situation in the Far East as generally good and constantly improving.

He pointed out that he had testified several times on ammunition before various congressional committees.

"Congress has done what it was asked to do," he said, "and has given us the ammunition funds which have been asked of it."

In answer to a direct question of supplies available at the front, General Collins testified that during 1952, United Nations fired more than 10 times as many rounds of all types of ammunition as did the Communists, and that during the peak of artillery shelling by the enemy last October and November, United Nations forces fired six times more shells.

"These heavy expenditures in Korea have been necessary to save casualties and at the same time to destroy the enemy in his heavily fortified positions," he said. "I have supported these expenditures in every possible way, even to the extent of lowering our depot stocks here in the United States."

General Collins noted it was unfortunate he had to go into great details about our past and present military situation in Korea, but added that "this has been well worth while" if it convinced the American people that sufficient shells are available at the front, and if it served warning to the enemy that fire from them will be met with "greater fire" from us.

Mr. Stevens stated that the stable defense line in Korea necessitated the use of different types of ammunition currently in demand there "because the enemy was well dug in" and "it would require heavier ammunition to blast him out."

Senator Harry S. Byrd (D-Va.), declaring it was a "national scandal" that front line troops should not have enough ammunition, called for the immediate reprimand and dismissal of those responsible for this situation.

"It is a national scandal why we have not been able to secure the delivery of adequate ammunition to fight the Korean war when it was admitted today that every single appropriation request made by the military was met by Congress," said Senator Byrd.

Sec. Wilson Testifies

The following is the text of Secretary Wilson's statement:

"As you know, I visited Korea with President Eisenhower, General Bradley and others early in December. While there I listened to discussions regarding the ammunition situation in Korea.

"Having no military experience in the field, I have no personal knowledge of how often a big gun should fire on the average. But after the discussion in Korea I did question General Van Fleet regarding the enemy's rate of fire as compared to our own.

"I assured the then President-elect while in Korea that if and when I was confirmed as Secretary of Defense, I would immediately take measures to correct any deficiencies in ammunition reserves and rate of production as compared to use. This matter was checked with Secretary Lovett and General Bradley just before Christmas.

"I have been actively following the current production, consumption and reserves of ammunition since I have been Secretary of Defense. In addition, in connection with a review of the 1954 budget requests, the three Military Departments and the Department of Defense are conducting an analysis and review of all major programs and items. Among the items receiving most careful study is the ammunition requirements as submitted in the Department of the Army budget now before the Congress. This review requires a careful analysis of each particular round of ammunition to determine requirements both for immediate and forecast consumption and for our reserve stocks. Both capacity to produce and monies available and to be made available are involved. Upon the completion of this review I propose to submit the results to this Committee, as well as to the Appropriations Committees in order that members of Congress may be fully informed about our ammunition situation.

"Substantial improvement has been made in the rate of production of the four sizes of ammunition that were considered most critical. The production in February exceeded (Please turn to Page 845)

Supreme Court Upholds Army In Test Case

The Supreme Court ruled this week that the Army is under no obligation to confer an officer commission on a serviceman whose loyalties are in question.

In an opinion handed down in the case of Dr. Stanley J. Orloff, a New York psychiatrist, the Court also declared that a man inducted as a medical specialist cannot demand assignment to duties as a doctor, if questions of loyalty are involved, even though that is the customary practice.

Dr. Orloff was inducted in the Army as a medical specialist although he was beyond the age liable for induction except in specialist categories. He had received medical training at Government expense during World War II.

Refuses Information

After induction, Dr. Orloff applied for a commission and filed the required loyalty certificate. However, he refused to give information about membership in organizations termed subversive by the Attorney General, and declined to answer if he was or ever had been a member of the Communist party on grounds of possible self incrimination.

Contending that his assignment as a medical laboratory technician was not that as a doctor, he argued that he was liable for service only as a doctor and was entitled to a commission or a discharge.

In the majority opinion, Justice Robert H. Jackson observed that Dr. Orloff "appears to be under the misconception that a commission is not only a matter of right, but is to be had upon his own terms." Justice Jackson pointed out that commissions are matters of discretion within the province of the President.

Explains Ruling

"It is true that the appointment he seeks is one that long and consistent practice seems never to have been denied to one serving as an Army doctor," he continued. "But if he is the first to be denied a commission it may also be that he is the first doctor to haggle about the questions concerning his loyalty."

FIRST WOMAN IN USA MC

The first woman to be commissioned in the Regular Army Medical Corps—there are 20 women doctors now in active service with the Army—was sworn in on 11 March at a Pentagon ceremony.

She is 1st Lt. Fae M. Adams, stationed at Camp Crowder, Mo., who served during WWII as an enlisted member of the WAC from 1943 until being commissioned a second lieutenant physical therapist in 1945.

She had completed pre-medical training before the war and after the war was graduated from the Women's Medical College in Philadelphia. She was commissioned a Reserve medical officer in July 1952.

Regular Army appointments for women doctors was made possible by legislation enacted last year.

Lt. Col. Mackin New Exec.

At Walter Reed Army MC

Lt. Col. James H. Mackin, MSC, has assumed duty as Executive Officer of Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C. He had been serving in a like capacity at Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.

World War II duty for Colonel Mackin included service in Australia and New Guinea from February 1942 until November 1944. He was Adjutant of his home National Guard outfit, the 135th Medical Regiment, during part of this time.

Returning to the states, he first became Adjutant and later Executive Officer of the Army's Vaughan General Hospital, Hines, Ill. In 1946 he was made Chief, Procurement, Separation, and Reserve Branch, Personnel Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General. This Washington duty was terminated by his transfer to Letterman Army Hospital in July 1948.

Besides attendance at the University of Wisconsin, Col. Mackin also attended the University of California, University of Maryland, and the University of San Francisco during nearby tours of Army duty.

He is a member of the American Hospital Association, University of Wisconsin Alumni Ass'n., and Army-Navy Club.

Colonel and Mrs. Mackin have taken up residence on the post at Walter Reed. They have two sons. Cpl. James H., Jr., is on duty with the Army in Europe while Richard E., is a Cadet at the U. S. Military Academy.

Army WMSC Is Six

The WMSC birthday marks the signing of Public Law 63 by President Truman in 1947 which created the Women's Medical Specialist Corps as a permanent part of the Army. Col. Emma E. Vogel, WMSC, now retired and residing in Florida, was the first Chief of the Corps. She was succeeded on 1 Dec. 1951 by Col. Nell Wickliffe.

Army Aviation School Created At Ft. Sill

The increased importance of aviation in the Army is pointed up with announcement that the Air Training Department of the Artillery School at Ft. Sill, Okla., has been superseded by establishment of an Army Aviation School there.

The Army now has about 2000 liaison aircraft and helicopters and has plans to double this force.

The school, which will give tactical training to pilots and mechanics, will have on its staff representatives of all branches of authorized Army aircraft. The Air Training Department consisted largely of Artillery personnel.

Officer Requirement

Officers who enter the school must have qualified in their basic arm or service. Upon completion of training, they will become pilots trained to employ their aircraft to accomplish the mission of their particular branch of service.

An exception to this policy of extensive training in a basic arm is that of warrant officer and enlisted men of the Transportation Corps. Warrant officers will be assigned after training as helicopter pilots in helicopter transportation companies. Enlisted men will be similarly trained to become co-pilots and crew chiefs for these units.

The Army Aviators School will come under supervision of the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, and within jurisdiction of the Commanding General, Fourth Army.

Army Aviation Advance

A Pentagon announcement said establishment of the new school reflects the advance of Army aviation, first tested during maneuvers in 1941 when light aircraft directed artillery fire and performed reconnaissance missions. Army aircraft first entered combat in North Africa late in 1942, proved invaluable to the Artillery and were nicknamed "grasshoppers."

Later in World War II the Army devised many other uses for these aircraft and in the post war period assigned them to branches other than Artillery.

At the start of the North Korean invasion, Army airplanes and helicopters were organic to the Artillery, Infantry, Armor, Signal Corps, Transportation Corps and Corps of Engineers. The outstanding performance of the helicopter in evacuation missions in Korea resulted in their authorization for the Medical Corps in October, 1952.

General James A. Van Fleet, until recently commander of the Eighth Army in Korea, will be the principal speaker at the annual West Point Founder's Day dinner, to be given by the West Point Society of New York on the night of Saturday, 14 March. The dinner will be held in New York city.

According to an announcement by Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, president of the Society, the program will also include a traditional report to the alumni of the metropolitan area by the Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving.

Admiral Fox Honored On 40th Anniversary

Vice Adm. Charles W. Fox, Chief of Naval Material, was honored last weekend at a dinner commemorating his 40 years of Naval service.

Two-hundred guests, including high-ranking Department of Defense and Navy officials, gathered at the Army and Navy Country Club on 6 March, to pay tribute to Admiral Fox—the only three-star officer ever to reach that rank from apprentice seaman without attending the Naval Academy or college.

Among the guests were Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNell; Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson; Under Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas; Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John F. Floberg; former Navy Secretaries John L. Sullivan and Dan A. Kimball; former Assistant Navy Secretary J. T. Koehler; Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.); Senator James H. Duff (R-Pa.); Representative William H. Bates (R-Mass.), and Representative Walter M. Mumma (R-Pa.).

A tribute to Admiral Fox was paid by the Quartermaster General of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. William P. T. Hill, USMC, a close friend since World War I days.

Naval officer friends presented a skit "The Sea Fox," parodying the admiral's career in the Navy Supply Corps. Songs kidded Admiral Fox about oyster forks, a 50-year supply of anchors and cataloging, subjects he has testified on before Congress as Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts and Chief of Naval Material. A final standing ovation was Admiral Fox joined the Navy after completing public school, participated in the Mexican campaign of 1914, and served overseas at Queenstown, Ireland, and Moutchic, France, during World War I. During this period he rose through the ranks to acting pay clerk, then was commissioned an ensign in the Supply Corps on 6 June 1919.

Between the two World Wars, he had varied duty, including Secretary to the Governor of the Island of St. Croix, and supply officer for the U. S. Navy Schneider Cup team which successfully competed in the seaplane races at Cowes, England in 1923.

At the beginning of World War II, he was supply officer on the USS Enterprise, which participated in nearly every major carrier engagement during the first year of the war. He became Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in October 1949, and Chief of Naval Material in October 1951.

Second Tour In Korea For Marine Aviators

Marine Corps aviators in company and field grades will be reassigned to Korea for second tours of duty in the combat zone, beginning this summer.

Lt. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, Acting Commandant of the Marine Corps, told THE JOURNAL this week that the new policy will be placed into effect in June. He did not indicate the long-range scope of the new plan, but said the initial group of officers to be returned to the Korean fighting "will be very small."

General Thomas noted that those officers who will be reassigned to Korea are "regular Marine aviators of the rank of major and below." He said second tours of duty for personnel in other categories, "except at their own request," are not planned for the immediate future.

The Navy, which has no firm rotation policy for its personnel in the combat area, said it "has been returning pilots (squadrons) for a second tour all along and some are now on third tours." A Navy spokesman indicated, however, that Navy "tours" are of varying periods. Navy tours of duty "for the Far East, NOT Korea," the Navy said, are 18 months, adding "There are of course exceptions to that policy, as it is just a policy, not a 'law'."

The Marine Commandant, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., who is now in Europe, said at Miami, Fla., prior to his departure, that all Marines would see service in Korea before any man was assigned a second tour of duty there. "Men are in the Marine Corps to fight," he was quoted, "and every man is going to get his chance."

BANDMASTER PREXY

Lt. Col. William F. Santelmann, USMC, put on his third musical hat in Miami, Fla., last week when he was elected president of the American Bandmasters Association at the annual convention of that organization.

The Marine bandmaster, who has served with the Marine Band in Washington, D. C., since 1923, holds two positions in the Corps, Leader of the United States Marine Band and Supervisor, Marine Corps Bands. He was assigned this latter military duty in January, 1953. He is the first military man on active duty to serve as ABA President.

Marine Squadrons Win

Three squadrons of Marine Air Group 15, commanded by Col. R. D. Moser, have taken three first places in the quarterly Pacific Fleet safety awards.

The squadrons, all based at the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, are Marine Fighter Squadron 235, commanded by Lt. Col. Cruger L. Bright; Marine Attack Squadron 251, commanded by Lt. Col. Sumner H. Whitten, and Marine Air Maintenance Squadron 15, commanded by Maj. Ernest Bealer.

The three squadrons compiled a total of over 4,500 accident-free air hours during the period 1 Oct. to 31 Dec. 1952, to win a 100 per cent safety score. VMF-235, winner of three previous safety awards in the past 18 months, took top honors over all Marine and Navy squadrons.

See Wave Careers Hurt By Promotion Policy

Navy promotion policies are having an adverse effect on the morale of Wave officers, THE JOURNAL learned this week, and are reported by observers to be damaging career opportunities for the Navy's women.

The basic problem, according to Wave officers, is a reluctance on the part of the Navy to promote qualified Regular Wave Line officers to the grade of commander. This, they say, is causing stagnation in the lower officer ranks, not only among Regular Line Waves but among those of the Regular staff corps' and active duty Reservists in both categories.

Authorized 28 Comdrs.

Although the Women's Armed Services Integration Act of 1948 authorizes the Navy to have 28 Regular Line Wave Commanders (based on present strength figures), only three are so serving. Two others have been selected but not yet promoted. Of this group, one is expected to move up to the rank of captain when Capt. Joy Bright Hancock, present Wave Director, retires on 1 May.

Wave officers first indicated their alarm about waning promotion opportunities last November when a Navy selection board reported only two Waves selected for promotion to commander. Six other Regular Wave Line officers are eligible for promotion to commander, and 17 others will become eligible on 1 July. All 23 of these women have 10 or more years' commissioned service.

Stalls Promotions

The Waves explain that the Navy's failure to move more officers out of the lieutenant commander grade has stalled promotions in other ranks.

This was borne out recently when the Bureau of Naval Personnel announced that it would not convene a Wave board for promotion to lieutenant commander at the same time that it convened its Regular male boards—although this has been the custom in the past.

This week, in announcing an inactive duty board for promotion of male officers to lieutenant commander, BuPers noted that "there are no currently scheduled boards for groups of women officer selection due to lack of vacancies for Regular Navy women officer promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander."

Bureau In Error

When queried by THE JOURNAL, the Bureau admitted that this statement was "in error" and "unfortunate." Capt. W. G. Cooper, Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Personnel said "a board will be convened before the end of the fiscal year."

Bearing out the Wave complaints, however, Captain Cooper stated that the board would select "not more than four officers." This, he explained, is due to the fact that the WASI Act of 1948 authorizes the Navy to have only 56 Regular Line Wave lieutenant commanders (based, again, on present strength figures), and that currently it has 56. Two of this group, however, as already mentioned, have been selected for promotion to commander and are to be given their new rank before 1 July. Two others recently submitted resignations, making it possible for four openings to occur in the rank of lieutenant commander before the selection board is convened.

Meanwhile, with promotions moving slowly at the top Wave levels, only slight promotion opportunity exists for about 70 Regular Wave Line lieutenants—all of whom have served from seven to eight years in that rank, and a large number of Regular Staff Corps lieutenants. Affected also are an even greater number of Reserve Waves of both the Line and staff corps, many of whom have served on active duty since early in World War II, and whose promotion depends on selections made in the Regular Line.

Add Marine Recruit Bn

To accommodate the increasing number of recruits reporting to the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, at Parris Island, S. C., the Marine Corps has announced the reactivation of the 5th Recruit Training Battalion.

Formerly, the Island was operating with three male and one female battalions. Increasing enlistments, however, necessitated the opening of another training organization.

Commanding officer of the new battalion is Maj. A. C. Hartkopt who had been serving as executive officer of the Headquarters and Service Battalion there. His executive officer is Maj. Edward E. Davis.

Guide words for today—

"We (the Government) are here not as masters but as servants, we are not here to glory in power, but to attest our loyalty to the commands and restrictions laid down by our sovereign, the people of the United States, in whose name and by whose will we exercise our brief authority."

—CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Here, from one of America's great minds, is a clear statement of a principle which must never be forgotten . . . a principle which distinguishes the free nations from the slave nations.

Only when Government is truly responsive to the wishes of the people—only when the people are governed by just laws, rather than by the whims of a few men—only when the laws serve the best interests of all the people, rather than those of special groups—then only can free nations enjoy their full opportunity to create, to produce, to improve their living standards.

Mindful of the words of Charles Evans Hughes, our leaders in government have the privilege and the duty of encouraging close cooperation between labor, business and government—that this nation may rise to even greater accomplishments in the future.

"Pacusan Dreamboat" Col. Gets New Job at AMC Hdqs.

One colonel was advanced to be Deputy Director, Directorate of Procurement, and another was transferred from the Northeastern Air Procurement District, Boston, Mass., to Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, Air Materiel Command has announced.

Col. Beverly H. Warren, who participated in the famed flight of the B-29 "The Pacusan Dreamboat" non-stop from Honolulu to Cairo over the North Pole in 1946, was transferred from his post of deputy director for production in the Directorate of Procurement and Production to deputy director of the directorate.

Col. Harley S. Jones, who had been commanding officer of the Northeastern Air Procurement District, succeeds Colonel Warren as deputy director for production.

These transfers were the result of the retirement of Maj. Gen. Arthur Thomas as CG of the Eastern Air Procurement District in New York City, and the appointment of Maj. Gen. Kenneth E. Weber, deputy director of Procurement and Production to that position. To complete the transfers, Colonel Jones was succeeded as commanding officer of the Boston office by his deputy, Col. Leroy C. Lewis.

Colonel Warren was one of the 10 crew members who made the flight in "The Pacusan Dreamboat" in 1946. The flight, piloted by Col. Clarence S. Irvine (now a major general and assigned to AMC Headquarters, as deputy commander for production), was made to demonstrate the long-range capabilities of the B-29.

Cut Military Personnel At FlyTAF Primary Schools

The Flying Training Air Force between now and 30 June will reduce from 71 to 28 the number of military personnel at the nine civilian-operated primary flying schools.

The action is expected to save more than $1,000,000 a year.

According to Maj. Gen. G. P. Disosway, FlyTAF Commander, and Lt. Col. John D. Collins, FlyTAF manpower chief, this marks a second cut in military strength. Last November, the military strength at the bases was reduced from 90 to 71.

The new military force at the nine primary schools will consist of 17 officers and 11 enlisted men, instead of 23 officers and 48 enlisted men.

Military functions which will be abolished or merged with similar contractor functions include the military security office, sergeant major's office, organizational supply unit, maintenance and supply unit, school secretary's office, statistical office, mail file and records unit and the physical training portion of the military unit.

Airman Honored

An airman who doesn't know how to swim but who rescued 27 flood victims during last month's storms along the English coast, was awarded a medal for bravery this week.

Airman 2/c Reis L. Leming was presented the Soldiers Medal in a brief Pentagon ceremony by General Nathan F. Twining, Acting USAF Chief of Staff. General Twining, in making the award, cited Airman Leming for his courage in making three dangerous trips through flood waters with a rubber raft to reach the imperiled people.

Airman Leming also has been presented the George Medal by Queen Elizabeth.

Inspect AFROTC Units

Annual Federal Inspections of the 209 AFROTC detachments throughout the nation, Puerto Rico and Hawaii are now under way and will continue through 28 May, Brig. Gen. M. K. Deichmann, AFROTC Commandant, has announced.

This will mark the first time the inspections have been carried out under the supervision of the newly created AFROTC Headquarters of the Air University, located in Montgomery, Ala. Prior to August, 1952 the AFROTC was under the jurisdiction of the Continental Air Command.

Since the AFROTC detachments are divided into ten regional areas of about 21 schools each, 10 liaison teams with jurisdiction over these divisions are conducting the inspections. The teams, however, have exchanged areas for the inspection period.

The primary purpose of the inspection is to examine the training, both in the classroom and on the drill field, of the 145,000 AFROTC Cadets now enrolled in American universities, and to note any deficiencies and difficulties which need correction in each unit.

The inspection is being conducted under the direction of Col. Adolf M. Wright, AFROTC Inspector General.

Members of the liaison teams making the inspections and their respective areas are:

Col. Byron R. Switzer, Lt. Col. Newton E. James, Capt. James C. Lambdin (TDY), Area A: Conn., Me., Mass., N. H., R. I., Vt.
Col. Paul A. Johnson, Lt. Col. William J. Hershenow, Maj. Joseph F. Gricius (TDY), Area B: Del., Dist. of Col., Md., N. J., N. Y.

ConAC Mission Change

The Air Force has deleted responsibility for command administration, training and logistical functions for units of the Air National Guard.

The action was taken to conform with law which states that these functions are the responsibilities of States, Territories, the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

ConAC will supervise training and inspection functions, Air Force officials said.

Air Weather Service Takes Action To Boost Re-Ups

(During recent weeks, THE JOURNAL has called attention to the serious drop in reenlistment rates among noncommissioned officers and has reported how the Services are taking steps to alleviate this situation. From Headquarters of the Air Weather Service in Washington, D. C., comes the following pertinent report)

The USAF Air Weather Service has turned to its airmen for the solution to its low reenlistment rate, a problem currently plaguing all of the military services. This was announced today (9 March) by Maj. Gen. W. O. Senter, CG of the Air Weather Service, who stated that a special Airman Advisory Board has been established at Andrews AFB in Maryland to consider all problems relating to the welfare of AWS airmen.

One of the initial projects of the new airman's board will be to investigate the causes of the low reenlistment rate and make appropriate recommendations to the CG of the Air Weather Service. While the board will devote most of its early attention to the reenlistment problem, it will be responsible as well for other matters concerning AWS airmen, not only in the Washington area, but world-wide.

In order to obtain a representative cross-section of Air Weather Service airmen to serve on the board, initial appointments have been made from the following AWS organizations: Headquarters, AWS, Headquarters, 9th Weather Group, the USAF Weather Central, and the Andrews Air Force Base weather station. All ranks are represented, from a veteran Master Sergeant to an Airman Second Class WAF. The board contains married and single airmen and all future members will be appointed by the board itself. The group will thus be self-perpetuating and is free of influence from the commanding officers of the units represented.

M/Sgt. Burdett Is President

The first president of the AWS Airman Advisory Board is M/Sgt. Curtis L. Burdett, who enlisted in the (then) Army Air Forces in October 1940 and is one of the ranking master sergeants in the Air Weather Service. The son of Mrs. Nellie H. Burdett of 281 Lincoln Street in Worcester, Mass., Sergeant Burdett is assigned to the AWS Directorate of Materiel at Andrews AFB.

While this new airman group is the first AWS board of its type, subordinate organizations in AWS have utilized similar airman councils in recent months. In a letter to field commanders last December, General Senter expressed his concern with the decreasing reenlistment rate in the Air Weather Service and urged that airman councils be used to determine the causes and recommend the best corrective action to be taken to overcome the difficulty. Many commanding officers referred the problem to airman councils already in existence within their organizations. The reports from these councils will be reviewed by the new AWS Airman Advisory Board and recommendations arising from them will be submitted to General Senter.

Advisory Councils

The use of employee advisory councils was developed originally by private industry to improve employee relations, where it proved to be an effective tool in industry's management programs. Profiting from this experience, the USAF Air Weather Service has been a leader in developing close-working liaison between civilian employees and enlisted personnel and their supervisors through the medium of both civilian and airman advisory councils. Recommendations and suggestions from the various management-employee councils are referred to the AWS Management Council at Andrews Air Force Base and members of the board, all officers, screen the recommendations with a view to securing action on the most meritorious of them.

In outlining the mission of the new airman board, General Senter stated, "In attempting to increase our reenlistment rate, it appears only logical to obtain constructive guidance from those airmen who are most concerned. Our experience clearly indicates that these advisory councils, composed as they are of experienced and serious airmen, provide us with answers not obtainable by any other means. Early reports from our field units, which are using similar airman councils, show that these young men and women are capable of developing very sound recommendations, many of which are receiving serious attention at this time. I am confident that our airman councils and boards will prove to be a major factor in improving our present reenlistments."

What's New at AiResearch

Smallest,
most compact
AC generator
ever built!

Actual Size

The induction generator is not new. What is new is the skill of AiResearch engineers in developing an AC generator so small... so light... and so efficient that it can be airborne!

Designed for use in missiles and airplanes, this new AiResearch AC generator is the only one of its kind now in quantity production. Simple and rugged in construction, it can be stored for 5 years. Thus it can replace all bulky, heavy, short-lived batteries.

Following are some of the characteristics of the new AiResearch AC generator: COMPACT: 4 3/4 lbs., 800 watts, 115/200 volts, 3 phase, 400 cycles; RUGGED: will withstand 50 g shock and 40 g acceleration by actual test; NO ALTITUDE PROBLEM: no brushes - tested to 50,000 feet; SIMPLE: designed for mass production - no critical nickel or cobalt;

MINIMUM AUXILIARY EQUIPMENT: needs only simple capacitor - no complicated voltage regulator or DC exciter.

Once again this unit demonstrates the ability of AiResearch engineers to design and manufacture small, light weight, precision equipment vital to high-speed, high-altitude flight.

Would you like to work with us? Qualified engineers, scientists and skilled craftsmen are needed here.

"We must be prepared on M-day—the day the enemy strikes—or we may never be prepared to avert defeat at the hands of any aggressor who uses against us the weapons of the future."—THE HON. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

The New "Red Look." Despite some cautious optimistic views in high places, there has been no visible evidence that the new masters of the Kremlin are any less of a threat to the peace of the world than was the reign of Stalin. In fact, it seems apparent that the successors are of the same dynasty and think and act along the same lines. As if the orations of Malenkov, Beria and Molotov at the funeral of Stalin were not revealing enough, their words were followed immediately by Communist actions in the brazen, unwarranted, and unprovoked shooting down of a U. S. Air Force F-84 Thunderjet and a British bomber in West Germany. The aggressors against the F-84 came out of Czechoslovakia and attacked our planes well within the U. S. Zone of Germany. Our demands for apology and indemnity are being met with the usual lies and evasion. The only effective defense against a repetition of such savagery is armed defense. It should be noted that since the order went out to "shoot them down" in northern Japan, the Red pilots have not been so bold.

Congress, and particularly the members of the Appropriations Committee, should read the funeral orations:

Premier Malenkov, "Our sacred duty is to strengthen by every means the mighty Soviet armed forces * * *."

Deputy Premier Beria, "We must intensify still more our vigilance. * * Our heroic armed forces are equipped with all types of modern weapons."

Foreign Minister Molotov, "To be faithful and worthy continuers of Stalin means always to remember and constantly to care about the strengthening of the Soviet Army and Navy, insuring the worthy preparedness of the Soviet armed forces."

These do not sound like the words of peace-makers. Neither were they tempered with talk of economy at the expense of preparedness, nor with charges of wastefulness by their military. They said, in effect, simply and forcefully, "we have strong, efficient armed forces and we intend to keep on strengthening them." Our answer here must be the same as along the Czechoslovakian border—a strengthening of our Armed Forces through the appropriation bill soon to be considered.

Medical Services. It is noted with satisfaction that President Eisenhower's Reorganization Plan No. 1, to establish a Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, does not incorporate the recommendations of the earlier Hoover Commission. The latter group would have turned over to a proposed civilian medical administration most of the general and station hospitals of the Army, Navy, and Air Force and a great deal of the military medical personnel, thus taking away from the Services the control of the treatment of their own personnel. The Eisenhower plan ignores this suggestion and transfers only the Public Health Service to the proposed set-up.

It would, indeed, be most unwise to tamper with the present administration and operation of the medical services of the Armed Forces—except perhaps to give them greater strength. The record made in the care of the wounded in Korea and the sick everywhere American troops are stationed is the best in history. This is a source of pride and satisfaction to every American family who has a son or daughter in uniform. It should not be disturbed.

SATURDAY, 14 MARCH 1953

Ammunition and Ups and Downs. Once again the Services have cause to be appreciative of the level-headedness of the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, Senator Leverett Saltonstall. A cross-fire of seemingly conflicting testimony concerning the adequateness of our ammunition supplies in Korea, complicated by the conditions imposed by the necessity for secrecy and the temptation of some to make political capital out of the problem, put the committee in a tough situation. Yet, Senator Saltonstall in discussing it with representatives of the press put it in what the Services know to be its true perspective.

"Who made the mistakes," he was asked.
"There is no evidence," the Senator replied, "that there is any specific person that made any mistake. The question was one of judgment perhaps over the long pull since World War II ended. You gentlemen will recall that we cut down our Air Force, our Army and our Navy, and then we tried to build them up again." The testimony shows, he said, that there have been shortages in the past, that stocks in Korea today are adequate for operations contemplated and that they are rapidly improving. He might have added also that the military does not always have a free hand in such matters, particularly when the top echelons

What About the Retired?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am a wife of a lower grade retired officer. We anticipated some benefits from the 30 year retirement, but after inflation ran away with our pay check (Congress not adjusting the Army pay comparable to the civilian pay) we have barely enough to live on. Congress made a football out of all the bills which might have helped us. The four per cent raise was almost a joke. It just put us over into another income tax bracket, while the landlord took the occasion to raise the rent to more than make up for the increase. Now another 30 June is approaching and another rent raise has been promised.

With the new survivors plan under study will Congress forget the retired personnel again? We have no union. To whom can we talk who will understand that the retired families must live also?

Overhaul Promotions!

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It appears to me that our present system of permanent promotion of officers needs some overhauling. Everyone is aware of the undesirable ultimate of promotions based solely on seniority and a warm body, but let's not completely overlook some of its merits. At the same time I do not believe we should underrate some of the adverse effects of the present system which, in general, precludes a junior officer from backing his convictions at conferences or staff meetings when there is a difference of opinion unless he cares to forego the possibility of future promotion.

In this connection, I believe that legislation could be enacted that would minimize the undesirable results of both systems and still incorporate the desired features of each. For example, if present laws were modified to make it mandatory that two of every three promotions of the Department of the Army and the Department of Defense become involved.

The crux of the Senator's remarks is in the "long pull since World War II" and the recalling of the financial ups and downs our forces have suffered since VJ-day. Many have forgotten that the North Korean attack and the UN decision to resist that aggression caught our forces with their strengths down after a period of economy. Budgets had been so meager that the Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee presented the military bill to the House with misgivings as to its adequacy. At one time General Eisenhower was invited to come down from Columbia University and advise Congress. At that time, he recommended that some of the cut funds be restored.

Ups-and-downs have been proved both costly and damaging. A smooth curve of production and strength best promotes economy and efficiency. This has been as true of the entire military potential as it has been of the ammunition situation in Korea.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

While the House Military Affairs Committee devoted two days this week to consideration of legislation which would place the WAAC's in the Army will all benefits provided for officers and men of the Army of the United States, the House Naval Affairs Committee received two letters from the Navy Department, one urging that the WAVES be made a permanent organization, be given pensions and be permitted to serve overseas, and the other opposing a reduction in the present minimum age for enlistment of 20 years.

50 Years Ago—

American "imperialism" doesn't appear to have produced any very dreadful results in Guam. The annual revenues have risen from $4,500 under Spanish rule to $49,000 under American rule, six first rate public schools have been established, good roads have been constructed, effective sanitary regulations have been instituted and the people are healthy, prosperous and contented. In fact they are so much pleased with the American brand of "imperialism" that they can't get enough of it.

85 Years Ago—

A bill was introduced in Congress this week to reduce the expenses of the Navy. It provides that all line officers of the Navy, on reaching the age of 60 years, shall be retired, and that no further promotions shall take place to any new grade created since the 1st of January 1860; that whenever the grades of admiral, rear admiral, commodore, lieutenant commander or ensign shall become vacant, they shall be abolished, and that at the close of the present academic year, the operations of the Naval Academy shall be suspended until Congress shall provide for their resumption.

be made by seniority and to permit a third promotion by selection we would have a more ideal system of promotion.

March of Dimes Record?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Reference is made to the article in the 7 March issue of THE JOURNAL concerning the March of Dimes donation by personnel of Benicia Arsenal, Calif.

The eleven officers and 1188 civilian personnel of the Gadsden Air Force Depot, Gadsden, Ala., donated $3,265.22 to the 1953 March of Dimes campaign, which amounts to a per capita donation of $2.72.

We are not belittling the contribution of the Benicia Arsenal but we at the Depot feel that our per capita donation was possibly the highest in the country.

The Commanding Officer of the Depot is Col. Solomon J. Zoller.

Military Bills in Capitol Spotlight

Congress Repeals Davis Rider; Studies Officer Promotions; Extends Dependents Assistance; Discusses Other Defense Matters

ASIDE from the top-featured Senate Armed Services Committee inquiry into the ammunition situation, it was a busy week on Capitol Hill for important Armed Forces legislation.

THE DAVIS AMENDMENT to the 1953 Appropriations Act was repealed and a stop-gap bill, effective until 1 July, was sent to the White House for certain approval by the President. The remedial legislation, introduced by Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) of the House Armed Services Committee provides numerical restrictions as of 30 June on the number of officers above captain in the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps and senior lieutenant in the Navy, instead of the percentage restrictions in the Davis Amendment.

Aside from opening the way for hundreds of delayed promotions in the Services, the emergency bill prevents the demotion on 1 April of some 5400 lieutenants in the Navy.

THE ARENDS SUBCOMMITTEE of the House Armed Services Committee, as an outgrowth of the Davis Amendment repeal legislation, has launched a study of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 with heavy emphasis on provisions relating to temporary officer promotions. This week, the Subcommittee, in executive session, heard testimony from Pentagon representatives, mainly Rear Adm. R. N. Smooth and Comdr. Rexford V. Wheeler of the Bureau of Naval Personnel. The sessions were held behind closed doors. The Subcommittee probably will make its report in April.

ENLISTED MEMBERS of the Services were heartened by passage in the Senate and House of legislation to extend the termination date of the Dependents Assistance Act of 1950 from 30 April 1953 to 1 July 1955. The new termination date coincides with the date upon which the authority to draft men in the Armed Services expires.

Testimony brought out the fact that 1,120,530 enlisted persons have Class Q allotments under provisions of the Dependents Assistance Act, which is estimated to cost $538,537,000 for fiscal year '54. Between 1 Aug. 1950 and 30 April 1953, the estimated expenditure by the Government is placed at $1.8 billion.

The legislation provides that the Government adds to the allotment of the serviceman the sum of $51.30 for one dependent, $77.10 for two and $96.90 for three dependents. Enlisted men in the lowest three grades must allot $40 per month of their pay.

The Dependents Assistance Act was explained as follows in a report by the House Armed Services Committee:

"Under existing law, enlisted personnel with dependents can provide increased allowances for their dependents by filing an application for a class Q allotment. Members of the lowest three pay grades (E-1, E-2, and E-3) must allot $40 of their own pay in order to qualify for the allotment. Then, depending upon the number of dependents involved, the Government adds to that allotment the sum of $51.30 if the enlisted man has one dependent, $77.10 if the enlisted man has two dependents, and $96.90 if the enlisted man has three dependents.

"Thus, the wife of a private with two children receives an allotment of $136.90 a month; with one child, the allotment would be $117.10; and for a wife alone, $91.30. The wife of a master sergeant with two children would receive an allotment of $176.90 a month, because enlisted members of the highest two pay grades (E-6 and E-7) are required to contribute $80 a month from their own pay; with a wife and one child, the allotment would be $157.10; with a wife alone, the allotment would also be $157.10, since enlisted members of pay grade E-4 and above, with a dependent or dependents, have always received a quarters allowance regardless of the number of dependents. The wife of a sergeant with two children would receive a minimum allotment of $156.90 a month, because enlisted men of pay grades E-4 and E-5 are required to contribute $60 a month to qualify for the allotment; with a wife alone, or a wife and one child, the allotment would amount to $137.10."

FORMER AF SECRETARY, now Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said this week that the Defense Department "is suffering from inside competition and the American people are suffering because of it." He told Philadelphia Evening Bulletin Forum on March 11 that "if the Pentagon operated under a Unification law which gave efficient business and military administration, with less Service friction, we'd get far more defense for less money."

Senator Symington said that if the public knew the facts about the military capabilities of the Soviet Union and the U. S. "the people themselves would demand a wholesale reorganization of our Defense Department, so as to get more defense for less money." He said that "for years a few of us have tried to get the truth of our military position to the people, because we believe our national security, far from preventing the publication of this information—rather demands it."

On the basis of the Philadelphia speech and his record while head of the Air Force, Senator Symington can be expected to speak out for tighter Unification of the Services as the 83d Congress progresses.

THE NAPLES, ITALY, naval installation of the U. S. Navy should be closed, in the opinion of Senator Russell Long (D-La.), who has introduced legislation to this effect. He says the operation there costs $10,000,000 and maintains that "this activity takes the prize for sheer waste without beneficial results." The Senator comments further: "Every indication points to the fact that wasteful expenditure... is a part of naval officer thinking to the effect that once in a good port, the Navy should never leave, until it is actually forced to depart by its own Government or actually thrown into the sea by the people occupying the land." His bill directs closing of this U. S. naval installation. (S. 1200).

ARMED FORCES members and their dependents would be prohibited from bringing certain firearms into the U. S. from overseas in a bill introduced this week by Representative Lester Holtzman (D-NY). He said that "if we were to look into the records of the courts of criminal jurisdiction throughout the country, we would find thousands of crimes of violence in which the so-called souvenirs were used." His bill would direct the Secretary of Defense to provide means for searching military personnel for such firearms.

YOU CANNOT GET THE BEST without paying for it, said Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.) this week in reporting his attendance at the recent 20th anniversary celebration of the founding of Barksfield AFB in Louisiana, together with General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff. Congressman Brooks said one of the striking features was a display of different aircraft with a price tag on each. The prices, he said, were listed as follows:

B-25	$ 138,657
B-26	196,347
B-29	627,243
B-36	2,634,686

Guard Officers May Apply

The National Guard Bureau is accepting applications from qualified Guard officers to attend the regular 10-month course at the Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., beginning next fall.

The course, which lasts from September 1953 to the middle of June 1954 is open to officers under 41 years of age who have at least eight and not more than 15 years of commissioned service, and who meet other requirements.

Brazen Reds Raise International Tension

POSSIBLY over-stimulated by the command-turnover in the Kremlin, Red Czechoslovakians flying MiG-15 planes, last Tuesday crossed the German frontier near Regensburg and something over ten miles within Germany attacked two American F-84 jets; one of our Thunderjets was hit and crippled, but its pilot parachuted to safety. The remaining Thunderjet flew back to the Eighty-sixth Wing's old base, near Munich. Its pilot appears to have made no counterattack on the enemy—presumably because of the scant success an F-84 could hope for in combat with two enemy planes of far superior performance. On Thursday a Red plane attacked and shot down a British multi-engine bomber on the Soviet-British frontier in Germany.

The sequel was prompt and, our handicaps, considered, about all that is immediately possible. Our new High Commissioner in West Germany promptly denounced the Czech action as an "outrage... a gross violation of the border... and the wanton shooting down of an American aircraft well inside the United States zone." He added, perhaps significantly, that the United States forces now "will know how to deal with any further incursion of this type." Our ambassador at Prague, Mr. Wadsworth, under State Department instructions, "protested in the strongest terms," noting the exact point of the interception—far within the border.

NO GREAT RESULT is expected from diplomatic channels. But it is within reason to expect that the frontier will hereafter be protected against Communist incursions as vigorously as is the Japanese frontier of late. The action of Tuesday was one of five incursions reported in Bavaria. It must be noted that of our six fighter wings in occupied Germany five are Thunderjets and only one the F-86 Sabre, which is ready to take on the MiG-15 at any time. General Hoyt S. Vandenberg some weeks ago pledged the sending of more Sabres "shortly," but that has not yet been announced more precisely as to time. We are by no means overstocked with Sabres, and our requirements for them are many. To Yugoslavia, for example, our prospective first shipment of 100 or more jets is of the F-84 (plus a few T-33 trainers). Yugoslavia expresses itself as well pleased, too, although it is worth mentioning that the Yugoslav chief of staff, Colonel-General Peko Dapcevic, who reached here this week for a fortnight's tour of Army and aircraft installations, is likely to ask for increased aid. While here he will see the group of Yugoslav pilots who are in this country receiving their jet training, preparatory to an intensive home-training program given with their assistance.

DESPITE A GREAT MANY TONS of printed matter and uncountable decibels of oratory, uttered in the past twelve days to explain the results which are to flow from the death of Josef Stalin, it cannot be said that the future is crystal clear. Secretary of State Dulles' hopeful intimation that the cause of world peace may be enhanced does not encounter widespread support; indeed there are sober prophets who think that it was Stalin's caution which held Russia back from rash adventures since 1945, and who fear that his successor may not with equal skill calculate what Russia can safely do. When prophets disagree, laymen can make up their own minds; they may find comfort in the fact that it was much the same thing a cycle ago, when our most sapient prophets failed to read the crystal ball with either unanimity or accuracy; the "unknown" new dictator of that day, whose name was Stalin, in a very short time had not only fully replaced the irreplaceable Lenin, but surpassed him in power. It will be wise to wait a time before deciding what Malenkov will do, and how well.

It is the Communist countries which have more reason to guess what is ahead. In Romania and Czechoslovakia and Hungary of late the satellite governments have experienced some sharp purges, with expectation of more to come. No doubt more will come, too, but just when, and exactly who is in line for purging must be a matter of some anxiety to a satellite chief who has been toadying to someone other than Malenkov.

IN THIS SEASON OF MYSTERY, one of the greatest of mysteries is that of Red China's future. Fourteen high-ranking officials of the Peiping government, headed by Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai, went to Moscow to express their grief over Stalin's death but the indication is that, with customary Chinese thrift, they took advantage of the occasion to carry on discussions with Malenkov and his deputies. It must be presumed that these dealt in large measure with Far East policies in which, so far, Moscow and Peiping appear to have been in complete harmony. Both Mao and Malenkov have gone to pains to proclaim their nation's unity. In the West there have been earnest expressions of the belief that continuance of this harmony is not guaranteed, but any such belief must spring from our hope rather than from any known substantial evidence.

It is based in large measure on the not unreasonable assumption that Mao Tse-tung has large ideas about China's role in world communism. He clearly recognized Stalin's primacy, and he also knew how to get a bargain in the way of armaments aid. Whether he now will continue to recognize the primacy of Stalin's successor is answerable only by someone who knows what an Oriental thinks. But over-eager expectations that the Chinese may be cool toward Malenkov's claim to primacy should be controlled; China still needs Russia's armaments aid, and may expect shortly to need that aid more than ever, and to that end may very well be entirely willing to continue the profitable partnership. Our own diplomats have an intimate knowledge of Oriental ability to keep an eye on the main chance.

THERE IS, OF COURSE, our abiding hope that, from whatever motives, the present working partnership of Eastern and Western Communists may some day be dissolved. Indeed some of our Allies appear to have built up their own policies on that pleasant possibility; they have persisted in maintaining a semblance of formal relations with Red China for that reason, and they have been greatly concerned lest those formal relations be disturbed by American pressures for "stronger" action on the fringes of Korea. Their hope, unlike dominant American belief, has been for a form of Titoism in Red China, and they are most unwilling to have any such possibility disturbed.

By coincidence, Marshal Tito himself, whose violent breach with Stalin some four years ago managed to split Yugoslavia away from Russia's control, to our great satisfaction, is at this moment en route by sea to London. The visit was planned long before Stalin's death, and the whole reason for it has never been announced.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

General-Flag Officer Limitations—The number of general and flag officers in the Armed Services, once limited by budgetary restrictions and the Officer Personnel Act, now is held in check—and at varying ceilings—by two other Congressional actions.

The Senate Armed Services Committee since last year has been on record as refusing to endorse more than 496 Army, 383 Air Force and 60 Marine Corps generals and 280 Navy admirals.

The new bill passed by the Senate this week and sent to the White House to replace the Davis Amendment permits the Army to have 504, Air Force 409 and Marine Corps 59 general officers, and 286 admirals for the Navy.

Notwithstanding the fact that the higher authorization (except for the Marine Corps) is in the formal legislation passed by Congress, while the Senate Armed Services Committee ceiling is not contained in any legislation, it can be anticipated that the lower ceiling levels will prevail.

It has never been determined how the Senate Armed Services Committee—actually it was a Subcommittee—arrived at the reduced ceilings on generals and admirals.

Manpower Commission Aftermath—Service officials who have been testifying at the Capitol during recent weeks on varied matters, notably the 1954 budget, have been hit with questions concerning the recommendation of the Manpower Commission which recently disbanded after suggesting a minimum reduction of 10 per cent in men, money and materiel. In the absence of action by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson on the report of the Commission, which was headed by Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR, the Pentagon witnesses before the Congressional committees have been reluctant to comment on the Commission's report.

It can now be reported, on the basis of the Commission's own documentation, that the sudden completion of the inquiry came as a surprise to the Commission itself. At one time a two-year study was forecast.

A memorandum for the Chairman from the Deputy Director of the Commission, dated 6 Feb., commented on six projects which the technical staff had been working on. It was noted that data had been obtained on three of them: personnel administration and accounting, general administration, and training. This material, said the memorandum, would be sent to the Services for comment on or about 15 Feb.

The Commission submitted its final report to Secretary Wilson on 18 Feb. (Details were reported in THE JOURNAL on 21 Feb.)

Davis Charges Navy With "Deliberate" Failure—Representative Glenn R. Davis (R-Wisc.), said this week he is "convinced" the Navy deliberately failed to inform its officer corps and the public about the mistake it made in computing officer personnel strengths for him immediately prior to passage of the controversial Davis amendment last summer.

In a letter to the Editor of the Washington Evening Star, Representative Davis said his rider "would have caused no hardship on junior officers if grossly inaccurate figures had not been submitted to the Appropriations Committee of the House." He said, in commenting on an editorial, that the Star was "misled by the failure of a certain officer, or certain officers, of the Navy Bureau of Personnel to present corrective information to officers of the Navy and the public, just as a great many other people were misled by this (as I am now convinced) deliberate failure."

The Navy explained to THE JOURNAL last December that the mistake was an "honest" one, made partly as a result of the hurry-up order from Representative Davis to provide the information. The Services, the Navy said, were given only an over-night period in which to compile the information, and thus some errors resulted.

O.K. Dental Training—The American Dental Association has approved dental internship training at three more Army hospitals—Valley Forge, Pa.; Percy Jones, Mich.; and Madigan, Wash. Previously approved were these Army hospitals: Letterman, San Francisco; Fitzsimons, Denver; Walter Reed, Washington, D. C.; and Brooke at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

New York Fund Director—Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, recently retired from active service as Commanding General of the First Army, with headquarters at Governors Island, New York, was designated as Director of The Greater New York Fund at a meeting of the Board of that organization held in New York on 11 March. Mr. Earl B. Schwulst, President of the organization, announced that General Crittenger will assume his duties on 1 April, and will move to the New York area in the near future. Since retirement from the Army last December, General and Mrs. Crittenger have been living in San Antonio, Tex.

The Greater New York Fund during the past few years has collected and distributed to welfare agencies in the metropolitan area over $70 million.

Commenting editorially on General Crittenger's appointment, The New York Times said on 12 March: "He has the qualities of leadership that will inspire devotion to a fine cause and the qualities of genial diplomacy that never come amiss when it is essential to have all hands working together as a team. He will bring strength and new promise to the execution of the fine purposes of the Fund and help to chart a course that can be expected to make this a more vigorous and more effective organization. The new executive vice president . . . will be in a position to add a fine public service to an already illustrious career."

Veterans Average Age—The average age of the nearly 20,000,000 living veterans in civil life in the U. S. is almost 38 years. But the extremes range from 111 years for the oldest veteran down to under 18 years for the youngest.

These figures were announced on 5 March by Veterans Administration, based on the estimated age distribution of veterans in civil life as of 31 Dec. 1952.

Following is a breakdown by war, showing the number of veterans of each war and their average age:

- Since Korea, 1,483,000 veterans, average age 26.
- WW II, 15,424,000 veterans, average age 34.
- WW I, 3,345,000 veterans, average age 59.
- Spanish-American War, 95,000 veterans, average age 76.
- Indian Wars, 295 veterans, average age 87.
- Civil War, 2 Union Army veterans, one 106 and the other 111 years old.

To Journal Readers

...Striking a blow for romance, a group of COLLEGE PRESIDENTS has protested the Navy's marital ban for ROTC students in the Holloway Program. With Spring in the air, the scholars say that STUDENT PROTESTS are more than academic. Congressional pressure to authorize ROTC MIDSHIPMEN MARRIAGES may develop before June.

...Just one of many little-known complications in current SURVIVOR BENEFIT legislation (The Journal, 7 March) is the fact that it's possible for the widow of a recruit to receive more dollars per month than was earned in pay and allowances by the serviceman on ACTIVE DUTY. The recruit's widow could receive $2.60 more a month than when her husband was alive; a general officer's widow, on the other hand, would receive $1043.92 LESS PER MONTH than the pay and allowances of her husband.

...Army officials are expected to confer shortly with Congressional BUDGET LEADERS concerning the proposed new issue uniform for enlisted men and also the optional BLUE DRESS uniform. No definite action is likely until after these conferences. If Congress gives the O.K., the Army would like to replace gradually the present EM garb with a uniform similar to the OFFICER UNIFORM of dark green coat and pinks.

...Turned down by former Asst. SecDef. Anna M. Rosenberg, the Air Force may try again to gain support for its plan to establish CASH AWARDS to military personnel who make outstanding suggestions which save men and money. Civilian employees of the Govt. receive such payments, which have become WIDESPREAD in civilian industry. The Services, notably the AF, feels the program should be broadened.

...Army Chaplains are pleased with the promotion of Col. Patrick J. Ryan, to be a BRIGADIER GENERAL. While the Navy and AF have had at least two chaplains in general and flag ranks, the Army Chief of Chaplains, Maj. Gen. Ivan L. Bennett, has been the sole general officer in the Army Chaplains Corps. The Army Chaplains felt slighted.

...The intricacies of the Navy RUNNING MATE system results in a situation next summer where advancement of one unrestricted line rear admiral, lower half, to upper half will mean the SIMULTANEOUS ADVANCEMENT of six staff corps admirals.

—Your Staff

President No VIP To Navy—The President apparently is no longer a "very important person" to the Navy.

Although an old Navy regulation listed the Nation's Chief Executive as one of the men to be accorded VIP treatment, the Navy has now modified the regulation, eliminating any mention of the President.

The President, as Commander in Chief of the Armed Services is, of course, accorded VIP treatment by the Navy.

VIP's, the modified version states, are "defined as military persons of General or Flag rank and outstanding civilian personages of equivalent status to include diplomats, Cabinet Members and Members of Congress. Others, military or civilian, may be designated as VIP because of their mission or position by the agency of the Department of Defense authorizing the individual's travel."

Other civilians also suffer as a result of the new definition. Whereas the old definition read "high civilian and military personnel" (with flag and general officers listed last), the positions have now been reversed.

President To Keep Williamsburg—The Navy said this week that President Eisenhower has decided to keep the Presidential yacht Williamsburg in service. It previously had been reported that the Chief Executive would not make use of the 243-foot luxury craft, and the Navy had moved it to Norfolk for a routine overhaul. This work is now being completed, at a reported cost of $60,000, and the vessel will be ready for the new President's use by the first of next month.

Meanwhile, the Williamsburg's former skipper, Capt. Edwin S. Miller, has been hospitalized at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., and a new C.O., Commander Julian T. Burke, jr., a former member of the ship's complement, appointed to succeed him.

Complete Text of the Defense Dept. Statement On Uniform Allowance Payments To Reservists

FOLLOWING is the official text of the Defense Department announcement of 12 March pertaining to new Uniform Allowance regulations for Reserve officers.

Regulations governing the payment of allowances for uniforms to Reserve officers of the military services, under the provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952, have been approved by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. They are designed to equalize as nearly as possible the payments to officers of all Reserve Components.

Prior to enactment of the Armed Forces Reserve Act (July 9, 1952), certain Reserve officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps were paid uniform allowances under varying statutes and in varying amounts.

Three Allowances

In general, the regulations provide for the payment of the following allowances:

(a) Initial Uniform Allowance: of an amount not exceeding $200 to be paid after 1 Jan. 1953 under specified conditions such as first reporting for active duty for period in excess of 90 days, and upon completion, of certain periods of active and inactive duty.

(b) Active Duty Allowance: of an amount not to exceed $100 to officers entering on active duty for more than 90 days when two years elapse between such periods of active duty. This allowance is payable retroactively to those officers who entered on active duty on or after 25 June 1950.

(c) Maintenance Allowance: of an amount not to exceed $50 for each four years of satisfactory service in a Reserve component which must include 28 days of active duty training. Extended periods of active duty for 90 days or more are not considered in computing the four years for eligibility. Effective date of this provision is 9 July 1952.

Conditions Told

Initial uniform allowance payment is barred by the previous payment of an initial uniform allowance under any other law. This allowance is payable as a reimbursement for the purchase of uniform under one of the following conditions:

(a) Upon first reporting for active duty for a period in excess of ninety days.

(b) Upon completion, as a member of a Reserve component, of not less than 14 days' active duty or active duty training; or

(c) After the performance of 14 periods of not less than 2 hours' duration each, of inactive-duty training as a member of the Ready Reserve; provided, that only duty requiring the wearing of the uniform is counted and that the payment of an initial officer's uniform allowance or reimbursement previously or subsequently under any other law bars such a payment under this act, and provided further that if the officer has served as a member of the Regular services on active duty, he is not entitled to an initial uniform allowance for duty performed within 2 years after his separation from the Regular service.

Initial Allowance Varies

The amount of the initial uniform allowance, which may not exceed $200, varies and is dependent upon the manner in which the officer received his commission. The following table indicates the amounts payable under the new regulations:

SOURCES OF RES. OFFICERS	Initial Uniform Allowance
A. Aviation Cadets
Air Force .....	$100
Navy .....	100
Navy (Commissioned in Mar. Corps) 200
B. Officer Candidate Schools
Army
Active duty enlisted .....	100
An enlisted member on inactive duty in the Army Reserve or National Guard ordered to OCS to revert to Army Reserve or National Guard as officer .....	200
Navy .....	200
Active Duty Enlisted:
Navy or Coast Guard CPO (male) (None)
Navy or Coast Guard below CPO (male) .....	200
Female Navy or Coast Guard (all) 100
Enlisted Reserves from inactive duty status (including ROC) .....	200
Air Force
Active Duty Enlisted .....	100
Marine Corps
Enlisted Regulars and Reserves on active duty (male and female) 100
Enlisted Reserves from inactive duty .....	200
C. ROTC and NROTC (all services) ...	200
D. Direct Procurement (all services)
(1) Civil Life .....	200
(2) Active duty enlisted status in same service* .....	100
(3) Transfer from Reserve component of another service or Army of the U. S. without component 200

* Except Navy which follows same procedure in case of OCS graduates.

Active Duty Allowance

An Active Duty allowance of $100 is payable for each time of entry or reentry on active duty or active duty for training on or after 25 June, 1950, where the active duty for training is for a period of more than 90 days.

This active duty allowance is not payable to an officer who enters on active duty or active duty for training within two years after completing a previous period of active duty or active duty for training as an officer. Nor is this allowance payable if the officer served on active duty as an officer in a regular component of the armed forces within the previous two year period.

Another bar to the payment of the $100 active duty allowance is the receipt of an initial uniform allowance of more than $200 during his current tour of active duty.

Both the active duty allowance of $100 and the initial uniform allowance may be paid to an officer as a result of one entry on active duty or active duty for training for more than 90 days, provided he meets the requirements of entitlement to each allowance.

In addition to the initial uniform allowance, and the active duty allowance, the new regulations also provide for the payment of maintenance allowance not to exceed $50 for reimbursement for the purchase of required uniforms and equipment upon the completion of each four years of satisfactory Federal service in a Reserve component after 9 July, 1952.

In computing this four year period, however, any period of active duty or active duty for training for a period in excess of 90 days is excluded. To receive this allowance, the officer must not have received a uniform allowance as an officer within the previous four years. He must also have served during the four-year period a minimum of 28 days of active duty or active duty for training. The four-year period may have started prior to 9 July, 1952, but must be completed after that date.

Navy and Marine Corps Reserve officers may elect, prior to 9 July, 1956, to receive the $50 uniform maintenance allowance provided by the Naval Reserve Act of 1938 or the Naval Aviation Cadet Act of 1942, in lieu of the uniform maintenance allowance provided in the new regulations.

Services Report Procedure

Reserve officers entitled to payment of the allowances provided in these regulations may submit their applications in the following manner:

ARMY
1. Initial uniform allowance:

(a) Officers first reporting for active duty for a period of more than 90 days may submit their military pay order to the finance officer maintaining their pay records.

(b) Officers claiming an initial uniform allowance on the basis of the completion of 14 days active duty or active duty for training should contact their personnel officer or commanding officer. This same procedure should be followed in the case of those officers claiming an initial uniform allowance based on the completion of 14 periods of inactive duty training assemblies or armory drills.

2. Maintenance allowance:
All officers claiming such an allowance should submit their claim to their commanding officer.

3. Active Duty allowance:
(a) Reserve officers currently on active duty may submit their claim to the finance officer who maintains their pay record.

(b) Reserve officers not on active duty, but who are members of a Reserve unit should submit their claim for active duty allowance to their commanding officer or personnel officer.

All claims of separated Army personnel for any allowance provided in this regulation may be submitted to the Settlements Division, Finance Center, U. S. Army, Indianapolis, Indiana.

NAVY

All initial allowance claims and all maintenance allowance claims may be submitted to the Chief of Naval Personnel, Washington 25, D. C.

Active duty allowance claims may be submitted:

(1) To the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts Field Branch, Cleveland, Ohio, if the officer claiming the allowance is not now on active duty.

(2) To the disbursing officer concerned in the case of those officers claiming the allowance who are now on active duty.

Claim forms for separated Naval personnel are not yet available.

AIR FORCE

All claims for allowances provided in these regulations by Air Force personnel on active duty, inactive duty training, or active duty for training should be submitted to the finance officer who is currently maintaining the officer's pay records.

Claims for amounts due deceased officers should be submitted to Settlements Division, Air Force Finance Center.

MARINE CORPS

AF Guided Missile Order

Northrop Aircraft, Inc., Hawthorne, Calif., has received Air Force orders for production of a quantity of guided missiles. Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, USAF-Ret., Northrop's chief executive officer, has announced.

The missile contracts now on hand call for deliveries through 1955. General Echols said. The newly announced contracts raise Northrop's backlog to an all-time high in excess of $500,000,000. A major portion of this backlog is for production of Air Force Scorpion F-89 all-weather interceptors.

Northrop has approximately 3300 of its personnel assigned to guided missile research, development and production activities. The Hawthorne company has been working continuously in the missile field since 1946.

In addition to its guided missile and Scorpion F-89 production contracts, Northrop is building optical range finders for the Army Ordnance Corps at its Anaheim, Calif. plant. A subsidiary, the Radioplane Company of Van Nuys, Calif., builds pilotless target planes for the Armed Services.

Reds Raise Tension

But it is of interest that at just this time the prime demonstrator of what a bold Red dictator can do to make himself independent of Moscow should be on his way to Britain for consultations.

The past week's Washington conference, for which Britain sent Anthony Eden and R. A. Butler to confer with our own State and Treasury chiefs, it happens, produced an agreement of very real importance to our Far East policies. It involves new Anglo-American effort to block the further flow of strategic materials to Red China; the British adoption of a new licensing system to prevent British ships from carrying such materials from non-British nations; and a decision to halt Commonwealth ports' re-fueling of non-British ships carrying such cargoes. This is not a blockade, the very mention of which still agitates Britain (and certain other allies), but it aims at much the same purpose. This Far East compact was not the main quest of the conference—which sought, rather, a long-range consideration of means to help Britain at home with "trade not aid"—but it was a most useful achievement, and possibly a help toward the attainment of Britain's own commercial hopes. The Eden-Butler suggestions in that important area were for larger American private investment in Britain; for a better gateway for British exports; and for encouragement of a British shipping revival through relaxing America's present requirement that fully 50 per cent of our aid goods shall be transported in American bottoms. None of these British hopes is assured, but all are under study.

The past week at SHAPE has been marked by the carrying-out, under Field Marshal Montgomery's direction, of a high-level command-post exercise over a five day period. It has engaged the close attention of 250 senior officers from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations. Its problems have affected them all, for Lord Montgomery's problems (laid out on grand-scale maps in the Rocquencourt hall a few steps from General Ridgway's offices) have touched potential military areas all the way from Norway's North Cape around and across Europe into the Atlantic, and back through the Mediterranean, to eastern Turkey. General Bradley, in his capacity as member of the Standing Group of the Military Committee, was among the observers.

Waves Make Permanent Rank

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white tulle over net and satin, made with a fitted bodice and train; a wide bertha of Swiss lace outlined the square neck and the same lace formed the tiny cap that held the long tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and freesias.

CAMP PICKETT, VA. An International Day Luncheon, featuring utility ware displays of countries all over the world, was held by the Women's Club here 4 March.

The luncheon came as part of a regularly scheduled business meeting held monthly by the Women's Club at the post Officers' Open Mess. Included in the displays were those representing France, Turkey, North Africa, Switzerland, Austria, the Scandinavian Countries, Italy, China, Japan, and the Pacific Islands.

Unique among the exhibits were those of France, highlighted by an old-fashioned silver-plated bed warmer and a collapsible fan-shaped fireplace guard; and the Pacific Islands, featuring besides the wooden ware, grass skirts and leis which trademark the islands, two attendants in native dress.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Charles Hornisher, Mrs. R. E. Taylor, and Mrs. J. A. Volkringer.

A lecture on flower arrangement will highlight the next business meeting and luncheon of the Women's Club, 7 April. A social meeting will be held 17 March. Both will be at the Officers' Open Mess, beginning at 1:15 p. m.

WEST POINT, N. Y. Army's hockey team closed out its season with a surprising 5 to 4 victory over the Royal Military College of Canada team in the 23d game of the international series at Smith Rink on 7 Mar.

The game has gained in stature through the years until it now is the highlight of the season for both teams. The series is unique in that a penalty has never been called against either team. In fact, the game is often referred to "as the most sporting athletic event in the world."

Each year the contest is held alternately in Canada and the United States. When a cadet arrives from across the border, he is immediately "adopted" by his opposite number on the opposing team. It is in this way that lasting, international, friendships are formed. During their stay the cadets of the two colleges mingle together.

This year a group of 96 RMC cadets made the trip, including the debating and pistol shooting teams. Brigadier A D Agnew, Commandant of the Canadian school, accompanied the group.

The game itself was one of the most exciting in the long series which began in 1923. Each team registered two goals apiece in both the first and second periods. The score was tied 4 to 4 until the last two minutes of play when Captain Dave Pistenma, Army's high scoring center, notched the goal that enabled Army to win its fifth game against its traditional foe from across the border. RMC has won 16 and one game ended in a tie.

In 1923 a cup was presented by RMC to the USMA and was deeded to the Academy as a memento of the first athletic meeting between the sister institutions. The series was once known as the only one in which the loser won the trophy. In 1939, however, on the occasion of the first USMA victory, West Point presented a companion cup to RMC to remain at the Canadian College as a pledge of friendship.

FT. MONROE, VA. A total of 24 boxes filled with 575 pounds of clothing, is on its way to the Heidelberg American Women's Club in Germany after being collected here by the Woman's Club at a tea in the historic quarters of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Urban Niblo at this oldest active fort in the United States.

The clothing will be distributed by the Heidelberg American Woman's Club to refugees in Western Germany, and was sent in answer to a plea from Mrs. Lucien Wells, welfare chairman of the Heidelberg group.

Mrs. E. J. F. Glavin, in charge of the Mercy packages project at Fort Monroe, said 1,304 articles were contributed, including 136 dresses, 22 coats and 112 men's apparel items. These clothes are distributed by the Heidelberg Club members from established stations to desperate refugees in an effort to alleviate their troubles as they find new homes.

Assisting Mrs. Glavin in sorting, packing and mailing the boxes were Mesdames R. M. Montague, S. G. Conley, R. L. Cook, R. H. Brown, J. A. Heintges, J. D. Bowen, D. M. MacWillie, L. T. Bonshu, and Mae(cq) Ewalt. Mrs. Glavin, whose husband, Col. E. J. F. Glavin, served in Heidelberg before he came here to Army Field Forces, and Mrs. Montague, whose husband, Maj. Gen. R. M. Montague, now Deputy Chief of Army Field Forces and until last fall with the U. S. Army Europe Headquarters in Heidelberg, were active in this welfare program of the Heidelberg American Woman's Club. Many other Army wives now at Fort Monroe participated in similar welfare projects during their husbands' tours in Germany and other war-torn countries.

In fact, it was while Colonel and Mrs. Glavin were previously stationed in Frankfurt that the couple set up the project of "Mercy Mail" as well as European Playmates, and educational and welfare program. When they were transferred to Heidelberg, the couple took along the projects to turn them over to the American Woman's Club there.

Mrs. Conley, another member of the Monroe packing committee, also had an active role in a welfare project of the Heidelberg club while Brig. Gen. Conley now with Army Field Forces at Fort Monroe, was assigned to European Headquarters. For more than a year Mrs. Conley served as chairman of Kinder Kare, a project devoted to the care of orphan children.

The clothing contributions were the "admission" price to the tea and tour of the Niblo home, which was built in 1819, and as the first set of quarters on the post, served for many years as the residence of commanding officers of Fort Monroe. Many historical figures have been visitors in this Building No. 1, including Abraham Lincoln and Lafayette.

Hostesses for the tea, which was sponsored by the Fort Monroe Woman's Club book and music sections, led respectively by Mrs. Thomas D. Gillis, and Mrs. J. L. Inskip, included Mesdames Ralph Haines, L. M. Scarborough, Max George, Brenton A. Devol, L. T. Bondshu, Nelson A. Mahone, R. E. Reordan and H. O. Holt. They were assisted by Mrs. John B. Richardson, Jr., the club president, and Mrs. Ward S. Ryan, the club program chairman.

Incidental music was played by Mrs. H. V. Hooper and Mrs. John Carter, both of Hilton Village, as the guests had tea and toured the interesting quarters which had the added beauty of many springtime flower arrangements for the event.

Alternating at the tea table during the afternoon were Mesdames Elwyn D. Post, S. G. Conley, Giles R. Carpenter, Richard C. Mallonee, D. G. McBride, E. O. Lee, J. P. Eckert and D. R. Heyne.

While active with ARDC headquarters Colonel Jerabek lived at 2552 Wyman Parkway, Baltimore. Previous to active military service he was associated with banking, property management and general insurance.

His overseas service included assignment as finance officer in the European Theater of Operation and the Asiatic Pacific Theater. Decorations included the Bronze Star, Belgian Fourragere, and the European Theater of Operation ribbon with five battle stars.

Colonel Jerabek was a member of the Masonic Lodge, Beta Phi Sigma Fraternity, San Diego Rowing Club, S.S. Athletic Club, and the San Diego Mounted Guard.

Colonel Jerabek was buried on 10 March at the Fort Rosecrans National Cemetery, San Diego.

QM Airborne Role

chutes and other aerial delivery equipment.

Before summarizing the Quartermaster accomplishments in the airborne field, a few facts relating to the historical background mission may be cited. In 1943, a Quartermaster unit was reorganized and trained for the express purpose of furnishing aerial resupply support to the ground forces. This unit was reorganized from a Quartermaster Mule Pack Company at Port Moresby, New Guinea. There had been, of course, aerial resupply activity prior to that date, but it was confined primarily to the airborne divisions. The Quartermaster Mule Pack Company is believed to be the first such unit organized specifically for aerial resupply purposes. Subsequently, Quartermaster units were organized under Army Air Corps Tables of Organization and Equipment and performed a similar mission. Shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea, the first post-war Army Aerial Supply Unit was formed. This was the 8081st Quartermaster Air Supply and Packaging Company, which was trained and shipped to FECOM, where it has made an enviable record for itself. In the past year the Army Forces in Europe have also been provided with adequate aerial supply support. In addition, several of the various type Quartermaster units have been located in the Continental United States.

Accomplishments Groups

Accomplishments in the airborne field can be readily grouped in the following order: research and development, distribution, maintenance, and training. First, with regard to research and development progress, in the past year and a half, eight new aerial delivery kits were approved for use, thus giving the Army the capability of dropping heavy weapons and various vehicles, ranging from the ¼-ton truck to the 2½-ton truck. The kit developed for dropping the 2½-ton truck also has been utilized in dropping heavy Engineer equipment such as the bulldozer, road grader, and front loader tractor, the latter weighing approximately 21,000 pounds. In addition, a new troop type parachute with superior performance characteristics has been recently standardized. Further, much progress has been made in the development of a rubberized container, popularly dubbed "the flying saucer," which may be used in dropping five gallons of fuel or water. Large scale tests on this item are scheduled in the next few months. Service testing of Quartermaster airborne items is performed by Army Field Forces Board No. 1, Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Centralized Functions

Much has been done to perfect storage, issue, and maintenance procedures on Quartermaster airborne items. These functions have been centralized in three principal installations in the United States:

(1) The Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot (Indiana) has been assigned airdrop equipment depot maintenance responsibility on a world-wide basis. A modern air equipment maintenance plant is under construction at that installation and when completed will be capable of complete assembly rebuilding for all items of Quartermaster airdrop equipment with the potential, when necessary, for emergency manufacture of major items.

(2) Airdrop equipment storage, issue, and in-storage maintenance have been assigned to the Richmond (Va.) Quartermaster Depot and the Memphis General Depot (Tenn.). Here, the required inspection, storage, issue, and maintenance of aerial delivery equipment are carried on in accordance with the latest scientific operating techniques. Among the outstanding operations at each depot is a pre-issue inspection of all personnel parachutes and airdrop items of equipment.

In addition, there have been established at Ft. Campbell, Ft. Benning, and Ft. Bragg, post field maintenance shops with the capability of performing field type maintenance on parachutes and heavy drop kits. The location of these shops at stations where major airborne units are in training and where the bulk of maintenance requirements are generated will result in great economies.

Finally, with respect to overall training achievements, the Quartermaster Corps initiated a course at the Quartermaster School, Ft. Lee, Va., in parachute packing, maintenance, and aerial delivery in May 1951. This course, which is of twelve weeks duration and designed to qualify officers and enlisted men as "riggers," covers personnel and cargo parachute packing, maintenance of parachute, and the use of airdrop equipment. In addition, the Quartermaster School conducts a course in aerial delivery of three weeks duration designed to teach aerial delivery techniques to military personnel who have a requirement for such knowledge by virtue of their assignment to airborne units. As of December 1952, 824 students were graduated from the parachute packing and aerial delivery course, and 217 students from the aerial delivery course.

In addition, much progress has been made in the field of training literature and doctrine. In the past year over twenty-four Department of the Army publications have been issued to present, in illustrated detail, packing and maintenance of parachute procedures as well as heavy drop techniques. Quartermaster airborne doctrine has also been disseminated in other media, such as graphic training aids and training films.

The greatest and most recent evidence of the progress made in the airborne field was revealed during Test No. 6, of Exercise Test Drop, which was conducted under the auspices of the XVIII Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, N. C., in conjunction with the Eighteenth Air Force. During this test, forty C-119 aircraft in a mass flight dropped into a simulated invasion area over found hundred tons of heavy Engineer equipment. Individual loads ranging from 13,000 to 21,000 pounds were dropped on as many as six 100-foot parachutes. This Engineer equipment was used to construct out of the Carolina forest an airfield, which in a period of seven days, was prepared to accommodate C-124 type troop carrier transport.

The Quartermaster Corps is proud of the role it has played in these rapid and sweeping airborne developments and is well prepared to keep abreast of the ever-changing concepts of airborne operations which will so greatly shape future military affairs.

Restudy Budget

Kyes, as Acting Secretary, on 7 Feb. issued a memorandum which ordered that every effort should be made "to secure intelligent savings and to reassess the urgency of proceeding at the planned rates with the various programs."

These revised budget figures—in effect, reductions—were to be submitted to the Defense Department by 28 Feb. and to the BOB by 2 March.

However, another step was added. Subsequent to 2 March, budget deliberations were still underway at the Pentagon, but with the BOB represented in the deliberations.

The expectation is that late this week or early next week, the revised fiscal '54 budget will be sent from the Pentagon to the BOB, probably with recommendation for at least a $2 billion cut in funds from the $41.5 asked by Mr. Truman.

In view of the fact that the BOB has been represented during the latest series of Pentagon talks, it is likely that it will not take more than several weeks for the BOB to polish up the new estimates for transmittal to the Appropriations Committee. Then, the hearings will resume.

Senate Ammo Investigation

the production in November by 57% and the production in February exceeded the use in Korea during January (the latest month for which figures are available) by 114%.

"As of now, we have the ammunition necessary for operations on the present scale; soon, it is fair to state, we shall have the amounts necessary to give the field commander considerable latitude in determining upon and supporting a more active type of operations."

Army Studies Truck Bodies Made of Wood

Three experimental truck bodies made entirely of wood have been developed for the Army and are being tested at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Should the models survive the severe obstacle trial-runs at Aberdeen, and prove their fitness and durability, the wooden bodies could be employed during wartime to conserve steel and relieve pressure on the automotive industry, Pentagon officials said.

The three designs are the brainchildren of the Timber Engineering Company of Washington, D. C., which built them under a $1 contract with Army Ordnance.

Climatic Extremities

Both the wood and the adhesives used in the bodies are capable of withstanding climatic extremities. The lumber itself was first pressure treated with a penetrating solution to prevent fungus attack and decay. It also was treated with a water repelling solution which protects the wood against water seepage and minimizes swelling and shrinking. The adhesive used to glue the various pieces of wood together was completely waterproofed to prevent delamination regardless of exposure to moist, tropical conditions.

A continuous curved laminated wood frame made by gluing together as many as 73 paper-thin wood strips was used to support the body instead of conventional steel frames.

Stressed Skin Construction

In one of the three designs, an aircraft engineering principle, "stressed skin construction," was employed. The frame or skeleton, made of bent laminated black gum veneers, with red oak plywood securely glued over both sides of these stout, rigid members, is composed of a single unit which is reported to have exceptional strength per pound of weight.

The second body is similar except that the stressed skin covers only the floor of the truck, leaving the frames exposed on the side panels.

The panels of the third body was made of solid red oak, edge glued so as to be easily removed for repair or replacement. These panels were designed so that the facilities of any furniture plant could be employed in their mass production.

The floor panels of all three types are identical except for thickness, and are made in four sections for convenience in assembling. To avoid buckling, each panel is attached to the frames with expansion bolts operating through elliptical shaped holes. Lateral movement is thus compensated.

Industrial College Course

Some 150 Reserve officers will join educators, business executives, industrialists and representatives of civic organizations in attending a two-week course in economic mobilization offered by the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in New York City beginning 23 March.

The course will be given by a team of six instructors from the Industrial College, headed by Col. James E. Reilly, AF, an expert on Russia. Four times as many Reserve officer applicants to attend the classes are expected as there will be openings.

Indus. College Selections

The Army has selected the following officers to attend the 1953-54 course of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces at Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C. All officers chosen are colonels, except the four whose names are preceded by an asterisk. They are lieutenant colonels.

Navy Accepts First R7V-1 Cargo-Pasenger Plane

The Navy will soon put into operation a 106-passenger Lockheed Super Constellation plane which can be quickly converted to an 18-ton cargo freighter or a 73 patient ambulance.

The plane, designated the R7V-1, has rearward facing seats which can be removed for cargo transportation or to permit installation of litters for hospital patients.

This fast, turbo-compound transport aircraft was accepted for the Navy this week by Capt. R. W. D. Woods, Bureau of Aeronautics representative at Lockheed's Burbank, Calif., plant. It was transferred immediately to Capt. J. I. Taylor, Commander Fleet Logistics Air Wing, Atlantic.

The convertibility of the plane is expected to save both money and manpower, and greatly step up the evacuation of combat and other forward area casualties. The R7V-1 can cruise on the longest air routes in the world at approximately 350 miles per hour without sacrifice of payload.

The second such ship off the assembly line will be assigned to service in the Pacific, where it will be operated on Military Air Transport Service routes by Naval Air Transport Squadron 8.

Orders To Small Business

Small business received $628,000,000 or 18.2 per cent of Navy orders in the United States between 1 July and 31 Dec. 1952, according to the office of Naval Material.

This compares with 20.9 per cent for the similar period in 1951. It is the first time that the proportion of Navy procurement going to small business has dropped since the beginning of the Korean conflict.

"Main factor in the drop," the Navy said, "was a heavy volume of purchases by the Bureau of Aeronautics which procures many complex items not suitable for manufacture by small concerns."

During the last half of 1952 the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts made 30 per cent of its purchases from small businesses. In this period small concerns received 72.6 per cent of all Navy contracts within their capabilities.

GMC Boosts Defense Output, Stockholders Told

Defense production was almost doubled in 1952 over the previous year, General Motors Corporation said this week, in its annual statement to stockholders.

Of the 1952 sales which totalled $7,549,154,419, defense products accounted for $1,452,000,000 compared to $761,000,000 the previous year.

For the most part, deliveries of defense assignments were in line with Government schedules. They included Allison jet engines, tanks, tank transmissions, range-finders for tanks, military trucks, aircraft bombing navigational computers, shells, rockets, cannon, gun-bomb-rocket sights and radar equipment.

Other defense weapons which went into production during 1952 were medium tanks, amphibious cargo carriers, Wright radial aircraft engines * and Wright Sapphire jet engines.

"In the future as in the past General Motors intends to devote its best energy and facilities to whatever defense production tasks may be assigned to it, notwithstanding the fact that from the standpoint of return to the shareholder defense business is considerably less attractive than commercial business," the statement said. "But of course, in the matter of defense business, return has not been the yardstick. That yardstick has been responsibility—a recognition that it devolves upon General Motors as an outstanding manufacturing organization to serve the country in an outstanding manner."

Hill AFB Begins F-89 Task

The first batch of the hundred F-89 Scorpion all-weather jet interceptors which will undergo minor repairs and modifications at Hill AFB, Utah, arrived there recently.

"Arrival of the planes marks the beginning of one of the most important projects ever handed this base by the Air Force," Colonel George K. Crain, director of maintenance engineering, said. "Hill Air Force Base has been chosen to handle world-wide supply and maintenance for the F-89. This is but the first crop of jets that will be repaired here because we have responsibility for repairing planes of this type."

Colonel Crain pointed out that training of personnel in jet overhaul has been going on for some time in preparation for the project. "We have enough skilled technicians now to get right to work on the jets," Colonel Crain declared. "As many personnel as needed will be transferred from the B-26 line to the F-89's."

New 'Chute Packer

A quicker and safer way to pack parachutes is being used by the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team at Ft. Benning, Ga.

A four-foot high device, improved from earlier designs by 1st Lt. Landrum Landreth commander of the 19th Quartermaster Detachment, almost cuts in half the time formerly required to pack reserve parachutes by hand.

The portable device lessens chances of malfunction by saving wear and tear of the nylon through the reduction of manhandling, 508th officials claim.

Built from scrap materials, the portable packer is 27½ inches long and 17 inches wide and has a metal tongue in the rear which drops over the top of the packed nylon while the chute is being compressed between the sides of the device, holding the parachute in place.

Attached to the side of the device is a shorter arm, operated by a spring foot pedal, which clamps down one side flap and allows packers to insert the rip cord handle into its cones and close the three flaps faster.

and about 4,000 to temporary captain. It must be emphasized that these are rough calculations.

Additionally, the Circular provides for selection of "five per centers" who must have completed a minimum of one year on active duty in present grade on current tour prior to 31 Dec. 1952.

The Department of the Army has given the field until 25 April to submit recommendations for promotions under the "five per cent" clause.

This means that they will be promoted after those within the zone of consideration are advanced.
